A Dedication . . . to the dedicated

"He is in the lead when it comes to the nicest person on campus."

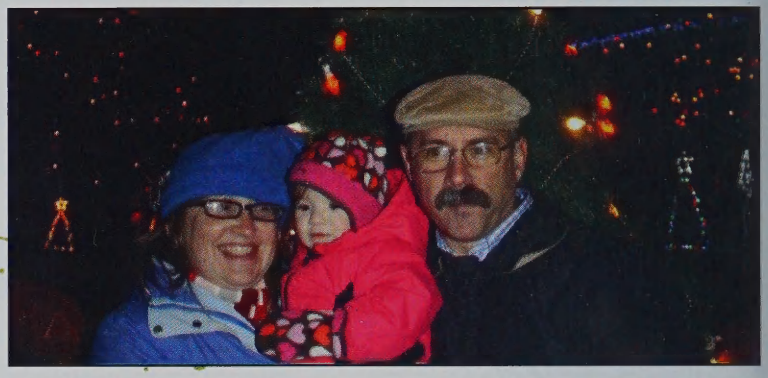
"MUSTACHE!"

"Phil LaFountain unabashedly preaches the Gospel the only way he knows how: with every ounce of passion in his being. He encourages students to think critically about their faith and gives them the courage to own it. He is also one of the kindest men I have ever met."

"He's amazing! He keeps it 100% authentic in his class."

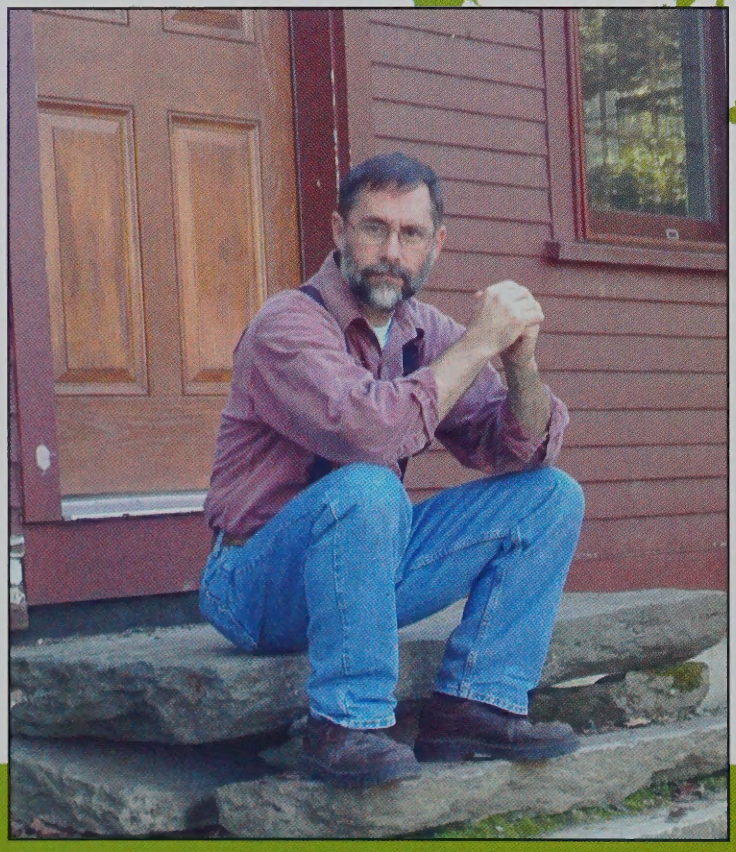
"He's the man, yo."

"Is there a nicer person - in the world? His kind nature and philosophical viewpoint have been inspiring to me as I figure out my place in the world."



"He really cares for his students and treats each one as a valuable person, student, and friend. He is a great teacher with a captivating teaching style."

[Dr. LaFountain]



You're sitting in the SCA awaiting your eight o'clock morning class and through your sleep deprived fog you hear the words "Ninja Panda" come from your professor's mouth. At first you think that you clearly are starting to hallucinate until you see that Dr. LaFountain is actually engaging in animated conversation with his students about his World of Warcraft characters. Dr. Lanfountain holds a ThD in Theology from Boston University, an M.Div. from Nazarene Theological Seminary, and a Bachelor of Arts from Eastern Nazarene College. From the very first time you meet Dr. LaFountain, he shows a natural ability to not only be himself but to encourage others to do the same. In a world where people go through their days just trying to get by, Dr. LaFountain radiates a rare sense of conviction in every part of his life. Whether you are talking about Holiness or his latest modifications to his motorcycle, Phil LaFountain is a man who engages himself passionately in conversation with both students and fellow faculty. Always ready with a kind word, Dr. LaFountain never fails to make his students feel important; to feel as though he really cares about their journey as a Christian and as a person. Dr. LaFountain, the students have spoken, and we would like to dedicate this yearbook to you. It is easy to see that you pour yourself into your work here at ENC and you are not just a professor, but a mentor and shining example for so many of us. This yearbook cannot possibly repay you for all you have done for us, but we hope that it will convey the unflagging respect and admiration that we have for you. Thank you!

. . . And a Word
from our fearless leader

Dear Students,

It's hard to believe that nearly four years have passed since you first arrived on campus as a freshman at Eastern Nazarene College, eager to begin this exciting new chapter in your life. In that time, there have been many changes here on campus. Major renovations and improvements were made to our college facilities, including a beautifully renovated Spangenberg Parlor, new dorm room furnishings and more. Nease Library became the home of the new Learning Commons, where members of the ENC community can easily conduct academic research, complete assignments with the help of learning assistants and receive technical support. And the Mann Student Center underwent a significant transformation, including the renovation of the Student Center Auditorium and the beautiful new lobby area highlighted by Hebrews Café.

"...embrace the transformation that has occurred within you.

As you reflect on your time here at ENC, however, it may surprise you to realize that the greatest transformation of all occurred within yourself. We hope, in fact, that your time here at Eastern Nazarene College has transformed you in some positive way. Perhaps you participated in a missions trip that helped you gain compassion and understanding for others. Or an academic course broadened your horizons and challenged you to consider new perspectives on a familiar issue. Or the opportunity to form friendships with students from diverse backgrounds sparked a desire to learn more about other cultures.

Now, as you prepare to leave ENC and venture forth into the world, you have the opportunity to embrace the transformation that has occurred within you. Wherever your path may take you and wherever He may lead you, the knowledge you have gained here and the experiences that defined your own, unique, personal transformation will shape and inform the impact you make on our world. And with God's grace and blessings, we know that impact will in some way be a visible reflection of His love.

Romans 12:2 tells us, "Do not conform to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Then you will be able to test and approve what God's will is—his good, pleasing and perfect will." On behalf of the faculty and staff of Eastern Nazarene College, I offer you our sincerest congratulations on your academic accomplishments and our very best wishes for the years to come.

Blessings,
Corlis McGee

President Corlis McGee

"I am only one, but I am one, I cannot do everything, but I can do something.

here am i. send me.

Two simple words. Send me. Together they seem, at first glance, unassuming, but they carry a tremendous and life-altering promise. To the speaker of those words, it means that they take on the seemingly impossible challenge of making a difference in a world that can be a dark place. It means that they will go, whether that be as a gym teacher, pastor, architect, or dentist, and accept the task of making the most out of this short existence. Individuals who take this pledge are the ones who set their standards sky-high and don't stop pushing; the ones who love the unlovable, invent the impossible, and grapple with the problems that no one else is willing to face.

And I will not let what I cannot do interfere with what I can do.

~Edward Hale

So, before you lies a choice. You can leave this place and live a comfortable life. You can treat life like a swimming pool, staying in your lane and taking laps, one after another, with no intention of creating major waves. Or you can get out of the pool, and decide to take the risks that few others do. You can open your mind and heart and allow yourself to be extraordinary; to give yourself the opportunity to reach for the moon, make mistakes, and most importantly, to love others endlessly and compassionately.

What will you choose?

Ok so here is the part of the yearbook each senior hopes and searches for. We watched the seniors of the past get all the spotlight and now it is finally our turn. The underclassman may grumble and whine about how we don't-nate the yearbook, but let's face it, that's because they wish they could be as awesome as us. We have earned our piece of the yearbook, and its about time that we got to take fancy pictures for no particular reason. So, now that you've gotten all dressed up and paid somebody to take pictures of you leaning on rustic brick walls and walking through sunlit wheat fields, go ahead and flip straight to your 1/6 page of pure you-filled glory.

Class of 2013

To the class of 2013,

Over the past four years we have experienced so much. We have laughed and cried, fought and made up. We have heard about devastating catastrophes that range from hurricanes to school shootings, and we have seen awe inspiring acts of common humanity and amazing growth throughout our world. Through all our experiences we have grown and matured into adults ready to take on the next challenge. Although we are all moving on to a new phase of life, I know we will never forget the experiences we had and the people we had them with. We might be headed in different directions, but I want to encourage you, classmates, to pray for an old friend if they come to mind, or send them a letter of encouragement. Finally, I want to challenge you, class of 2013, to walk in love. To spread the love of God that has been graciously given to you. Find a church community to become involved in even though no one is forcing you to go to chapel twice a week. Walk with God.

"Trust in the LORD with all your heart, And lean not on your own understanding;
In all your ways acknowledge Him, And He shall direct your paths." -Proverbs 3:5-6

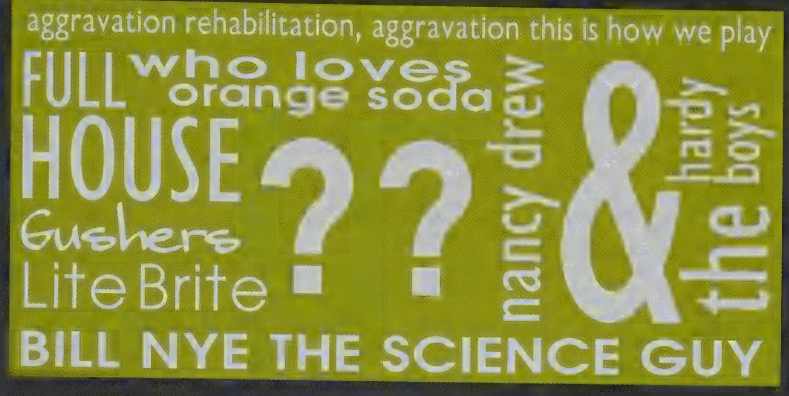
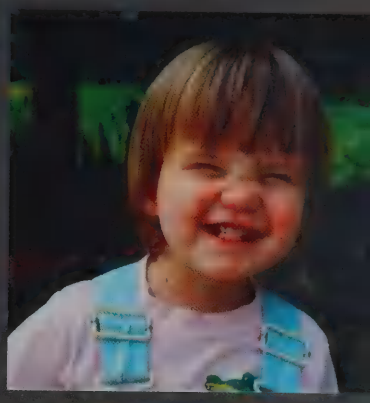
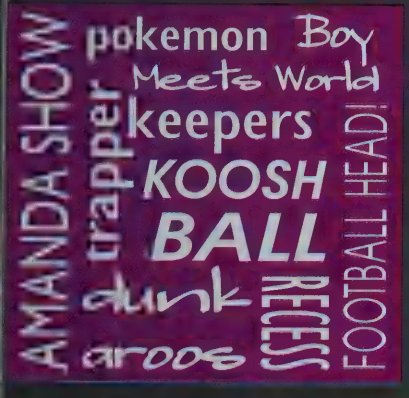
the best of times







The 90's. A time where you rushed home after school to catch Hey Arnold and feed your Tamagotchi pet (or if you were like me, after two days you promptly forgot about your Tamagotchi pet and the poor thing just died). Back then you were the coolest kid at the lunch table if your mom let you have a Lunchable and some Dunkaroos, and where half of all arguments involved which Power Ranger you wanted to be. You knew who loved orange soda, you knew that stoop kid was afraid to leave his stoop, and you always wanted an uncle like Uncle Tito or Raymundo.

As we come to a point in our lives where everyone is telling us to get ready to be grown-ups, to examine how things will be, I think we should look back at what we used to be. We could find joy in something as simple as a Koosh ball, and we would only see endless possibilities when presented with the opportunity to build a stick fort. We lived each day with everything we had, and took all that life offered us (that is until Mom called us in for dinner). So, as you make these very grown-up decisions, don't forget to take a few lessons from your childhood self, and never neglect to recognize the people and the things that shaped you into the person you are today.

Hello my friends of the underclassman variety. While everyone says that yearbooks are for the seniors, lets face it, you all deserve some time in the sun! You have stories to be told and I can't deny that ya'll got some serious swag (I mean, you learn from the best). So, while this year's seniors are masters of all things collegiate and awesome, you will soon be taking up the gauntlet of awesomeness; sooner, in fact, than you can ever imagine. When you've achieved the coveted title of "Senior", it will be important that you can look back and see the person you were so that you can appreciate the person you have become. Although seniors are still the bomb-diggity, here is a place dedicated to your friends, your experiences, YOUR memories.

"Since coming here I have come to a deeper understanding of who God is and what He means in my life. I struggle with anxiety and have been through some rough situations while at ENC. The only consolation was that I was on a Christian campus where I was encouraged, prayed for, and truly loved by my friends and teachers. Rough times are going to happen. But it's what you do in those tough times that define who you truly are. You have two options: to give everything to God and trust Him completely, or you can try to control the situation yourself. If you give everything over to God, He will transform your life into a beautiful testimony of His power and love.

Oh Sophomore year... It's that magical time where you've finally got yo peeps, and you actually got to pick your roommate. You're not the newbie anymore and you're in the full swing of college life. Take this time to put yourself out there and to find out who you are. Don't be afraid to be a little crazy and go sit at a different caf table (GASP!) or join that club you've been thinking about. Seriously, don't be afraid to do you because this is pretty much the only time in life you can do college stuff... like... wear leggings as pants (although that's debatable) or eat m&ms for lunch, or stay up until four in the morning watching movies with friends. Go forth, ye lads and lasses, and flourish.

"The year of 2013 I declared that my motto would be FEAR NOT because fear is a LIAR. Fear holds everyone back from reaching their full potential and achieving their goals and dreams. It also hinders an individual from becoming the person they want to be or are called to be. Above all, fear imprisons us all from going out into the world and taking charge with courage and faith. This year I refused to allow fear to consume me. Fear of the unknown, fear of the "should've, could've, and would've" and fear of inadequacy. We were not born to be fearful but to be soldiers! "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love and of a sound mind." (2 Timothy 1:7) I no longer want to or will be a slave to fear. Will you? FEAR NOT!"

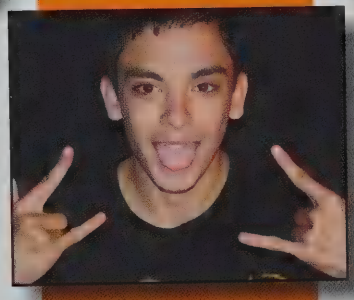
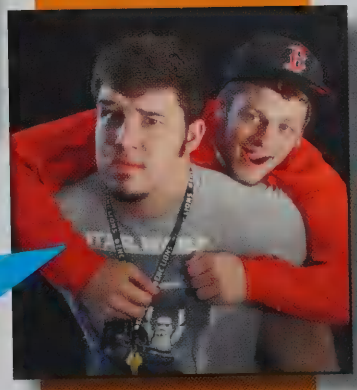
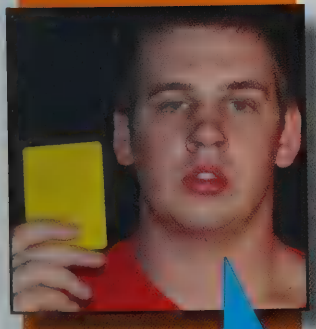
"ENC's finest!"

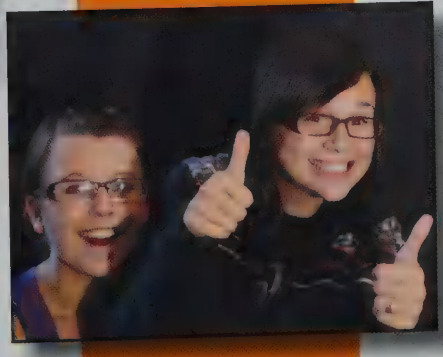




"#daaaaad?"



"#siiiiiir?!"



"Could you learn to love me?!"

You see them in class, you can spot them eating in the caf, and sometimes you can catch them traipsing about campus. These are the people who make Eastern Nazarene College possible, but more importantly they are the individuals who help us discover who we are. They guide us, grade us, and mentor us until we are good and ready to head out into the real world. They are the ENC faculty and staff, and we figure that they deserve to have their own part in this yearbook, seeing as they constantly put up with our shenanigans.

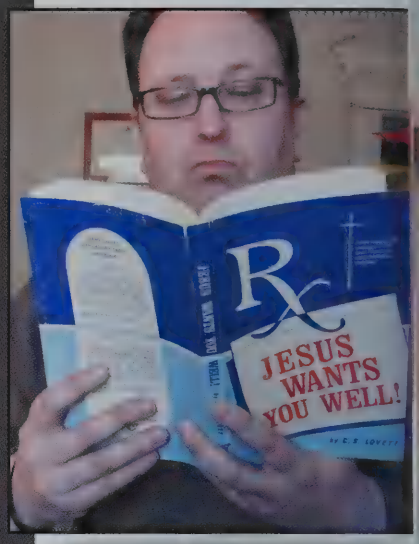
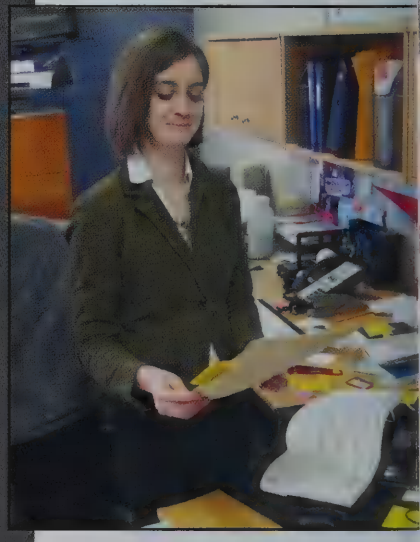
This year the faculty and staff of ENC were a wily bunch. Trying to get pictures of them was like herding a bunch of cats and with all of the searching, here is who we found. So faculty and staff, needless to say you are a picture shy bunch (excluding Brian Massey and Matt Henry who insisted on ten-minute photo shoots) but we still love you all and we are forever grateful for your guidance and support.





Okay, now take one of me pretending to read this book. I'm going to make a quizzical face. Let me know if it's good.

Professor of Psychology

He arrived as a ministerial student at 17 years old and was changing his major to Psychology the very hour President Kennedy was shot in Dallas. With the excellent education he received from professors like Cecil Paul he was able to get a Fellowship to study for a PH.D. in Clinical Psychology and teach and counsel over many years.

As a student Edith Cove inspired him with her slides of foreign trips and he has been able to travel all over the world with students, colleagues, and alumni. Dr. Fish married a Crusader cheerleader and has been able to teach two generations of counselors in the Marriage and Family Counseling Masters program.

"Dr. Fish is a man of many wonders. I only have a few more months to do what no other student has been able to accomplish; which is to get a perfect score on a test of his. I haven't even been able to make it to any of my other classes because I study so much. That might be a problem..." -Student

"ENC has been an important part of my life for over 50 years. God, through ENC, has given me opportunities for ministry far beyond what I dreamed of as a freshman in 1962. 'I will pour out my Spirit... your young men will see visions, your old men will dream dreams.' Acts 2:17."

-Dick Fish

Professor of Philisophy

"Confucius defined 'study' as finding a good teacher and imitating their words and actions. In my past couple years at ENC, Eric has been that good teacher to me. So many of us have been impacted by not only the classes he teaches but also by the way his example teaches us to live our lives in a better manner. I've watched him play the roles of teacher, preacher, gardner, carpenter, father, husband, and friend. He will be sorely missed, and I thank him for everything he's done for me and the ENC community." -Student

'Taking classes from Severson has made me rethink the way I want to live out my Christian faith. He has allowed me to wrestle with important and uncomfortable issues and made me realize that I am tied to this world in more ways than I recognize. I now understand that I am responsible for all that I am tethered to, no matter how great the distance between." -Student

"The ENC community has offered me the wonderful opportunity to do what I love the most, to engage earnest and dedicated young adults on questions that are at the heart of Christian and human existence. I am tremendously grateful for these nine years, and will always carry this place with me, as well as the unique group of people here that have helped to make me who I am. Thank you.""

-Eric

AND YOU WILL BE

"Well, if you mustache, Vern is one of my favorite people in the ENC community. His genuine concern and love for students often goes unnoticed, yet he continues to serve without the recognition he deserves. This humble man is quick to listen to the voices of students and be there to support them; whether that be through offering words of wisdom and advice or as a fan in the stands. ENC is losing an incredibly valuable member of its community and he will be greatly missed." -Student

"At the end of my sophomore year, I got to know Dr. Vern Wesley on a more personal level during our trip to Canada for NSLC. He quickly became one of my favorite members of the ENC community. His office door is always open to students, something that has come in handy when I have needed advice or have just needed someone to share some encouragement. I will truly miss his presence on the ENC campus and feel sorry for the future students who will never get to meet such a wonderful man." -Student

"Eastern Nazarene College is a wonderful place, rich with history and abundant in people who love students. Being at ENC has been an enriching time of growth for me - professionally, personally, and spiritually. I have learned a lot about all that goes on behind the scenes of running a college. I have nothing bad to say about my time at ENC. Ribka and I fell in love with the campus, the city of Quincy, and all the history and character that is Boston! We will miss this community of Christ-followers a lot! Go Lions!"

-Vern

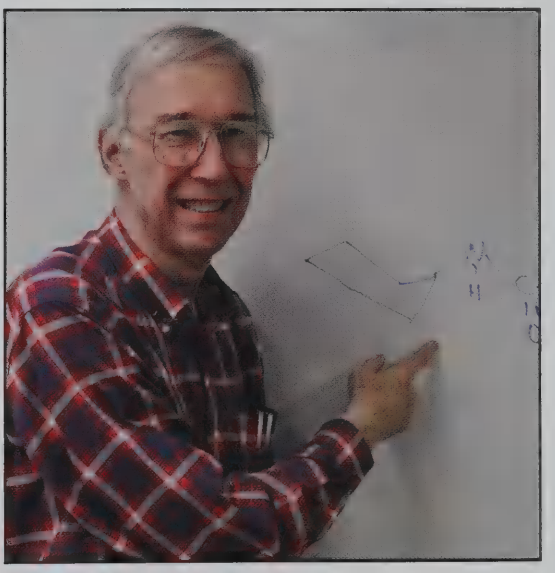
Dr. Vernon Wesley
Vice President of Student Development

From his home in Ohio and The Church of the Nazarene and his interest in chemistry, Lowell Hall knew ENC was the college for him. He found the Chemistry Department to be excellent. The whole intellectual and spiritual environment nurtured him greatly. Classmates, as they journeyed together, became friends for a lifetime. Dr. Hall served as Freshman Greenbook editor, member of the debate team, sophomore class president, Editor of The Campus Camera, and was involved in drama as part of college parties. His most special memories are meeting Dorla Drumm and their wonderful romance; they fell in love and married.

He came to work at ENC as Head of the Department of Chemistry and Dorla became the Office Manager of the Division of Science and Mathematics. Recent years have seen a culmination of his research with active participation in an NIH-sponsored research project (jointly with the University of Connecticut, School of Pharmacy).

"These years at ENC have given me many opportunities and privileges, including a long line of excellent students. What a privilege to watch them grow and develop as students and then enter their own professional careers and continue their faith journeys. Altogether ENC is an academic community in which the best in Christian education and our Christian faith can flourish."

-Professor Hall



Dr. Lowell Hall
Professor of Chemistry

"Dr. Hall is a great guy and I was honored to have him as a professor. The only thing I will miss more than his brilliant teaching style, are the stories that he seems to be able to relate to any of my life situations." -Student

Most of us are going to calm down, get a job, marry and have 2.5 kids, but for now we are young and impetuous, and these memories are going to be ones we look back on with fondness. When you're old and you've got your 2.5, you can flip to this page and show them what the Bernie is all about, and tell them that if it's not China Jade, you aint doing it right. You can tell them that Nazzy naps are the best kind and that you're only cool if you got yourself a Twitter #lolzomgcray #hashtags #lovemesometweets. Keep it real and show them how we did it circa 2013!

What is the best cheesy pick-up line?

"I just finished reading the book of Numbers and do you know what I realized? I don't have yours."

Guy: "Feel my shirt. Do you know what material that is?"
Girl: "No, what?"
Guy: "Boyfriend material."

"I lost my teddy bear... can I cuddle with you instead?"

"I've got skittles in my mouth. Wanna taste the rainbow?"

"Do you believe in love at first sight or should I walk by again?"

What is your most embarrassing moment at ENC?

"I fell UP the stairs of Cantebury, ripped my jeans and had to go to the nurse."

"I left my keys in Cove and ran back after my class had ended only to burst in on a completely different class. I was so embarrassed that I crawled out of there."

"Im not really going to get into it, but lets just say that I definitely have to get some curtains..."

"I accidently dropped a plate in the caf... and you know how that goes."

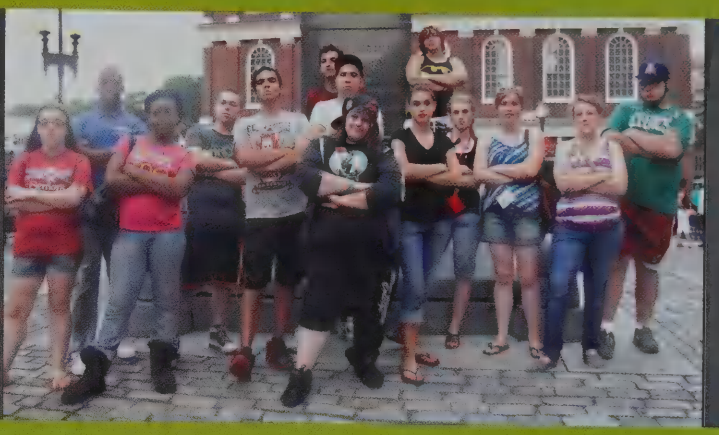
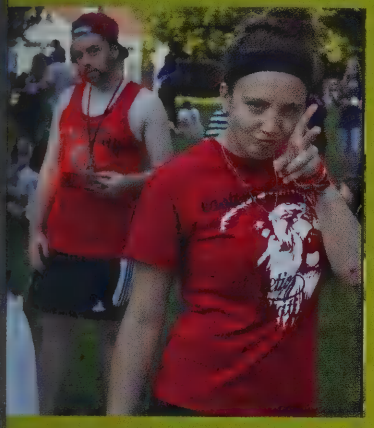
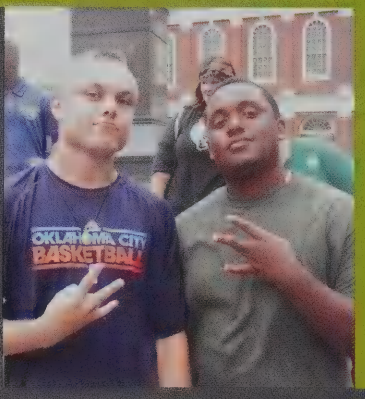
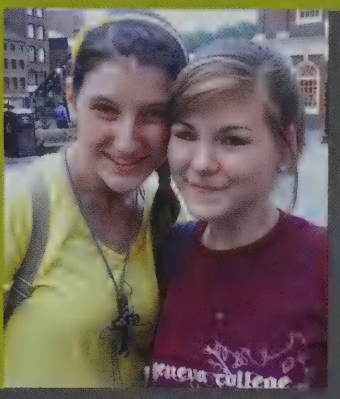
What is NSO? It's a time for new students to explore the campus and the city that they will call home for the next four years. During NSO, incoming freshmen get to know upperclassmen and campus leaders, peers, and faculty. They learn all of the quirks of campus, like the insanity of the infamous "ENC squirrels", or that you can wake up two minutes before class and saunter your way over, making it in time to update your status. They figure out how to navigate the MBTA and they explore the streets of Boston looking for red-neck banjo players, thugs, and their nerdy SGA president wearing khaki high-waters. They do this and all the while, almost without realizing, they're making friendships that may last a life-time.

New Student Orientation









"The New Student Orientation really helped me meet the other new students before classes began. Coming in mid-year, I was glad to get to know others coming in at the same time and have a smoother transition!"

-Mikayla Birnstiel

"The best part of NSO was that you got to connect with other people right off the bat. And it was awesome that they help you move in!"

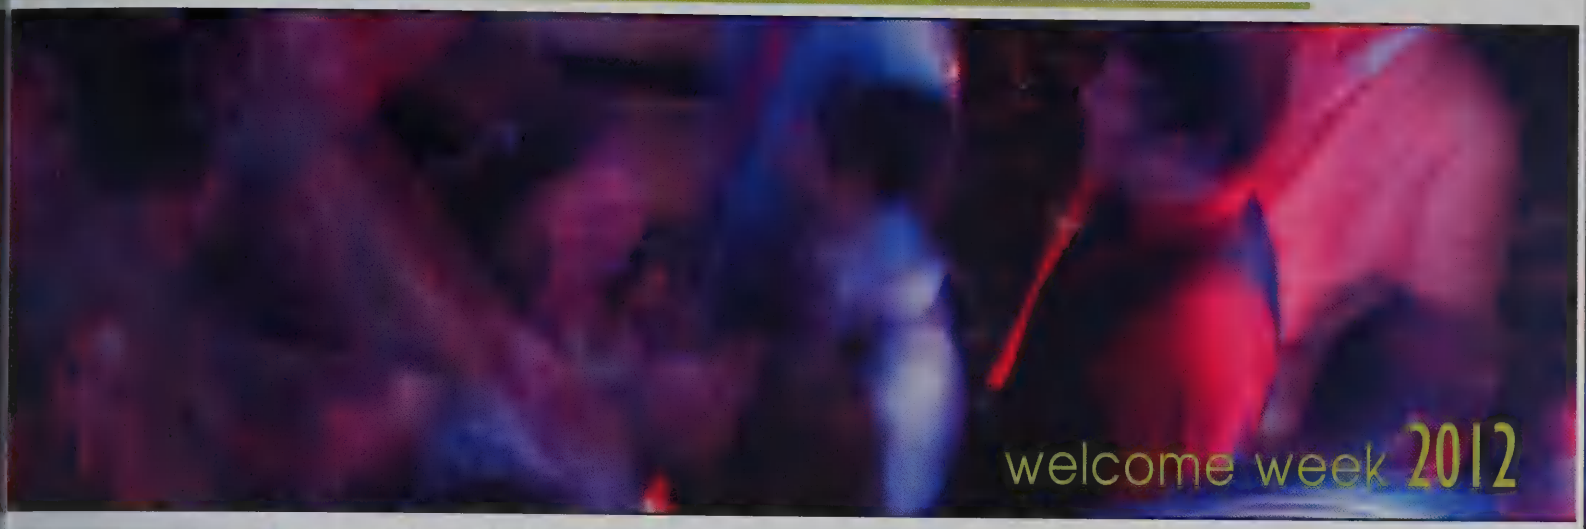
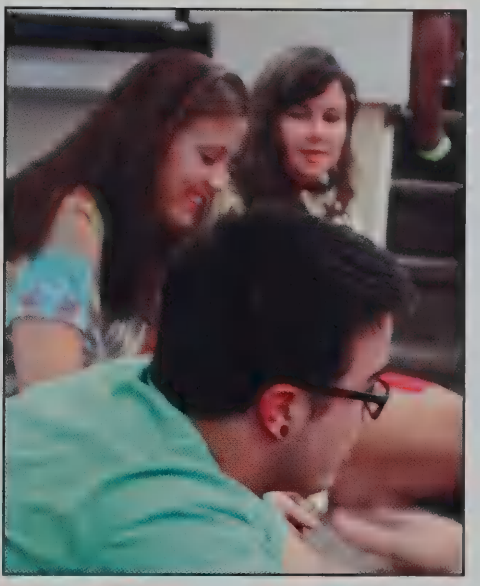
a new year... and New Beginnings

"Welcome week makes coming back to ENC that much better."
~ Hillary Sunberg

As summer closes and students return with summer stories, beach tans and minivans full of microwaves and laundry detergent, everyone begins to settle into the school rhythm at the Naz. To help the year start off with a bang, SGA puts on Welcome Week for the student body. This is seven days of campus craziness where students are able to get together and watch people throw up milk, play a game that involves people jumping on one another in a giant pig pile, and other various shenanigans.

This year, the week-long celebration included a Milkshake Social in Spange, Kingdom Experience, and the ever-popular All Campus Bash, ending out the week with a cruise in Boston harbor on the majestic Spirit of Boston. Welcome Week never fails to be a time of fun, laughter, new friendships, and really strange activities, and this years festivities definitely lived up to expectations.





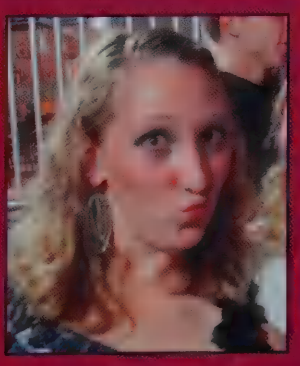
Buck Buck. It is a long standing tradition that an elite group of courageous individuals should risk their health in a game that gives victory to those who can make the largest pile of people. In fact, this sport is so harrowing, that one must sign...The Waiver. The one document that means you have crossed over from an ordinary ENC student to one who is willing to put life and limb on the line, all for the sake of competition and entertainment. The brave souls who sign this form are valiant of heart and more than a little crazy, and no waiver can stop them from achieving buck-buck glory.

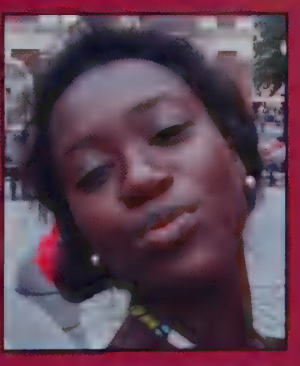
"The sacred art of buck buck is greater than the creation of sliced bread, which incidentally took place in 1929."

~Andrew Kohr

"It was such a great time! I can't wait for next year."

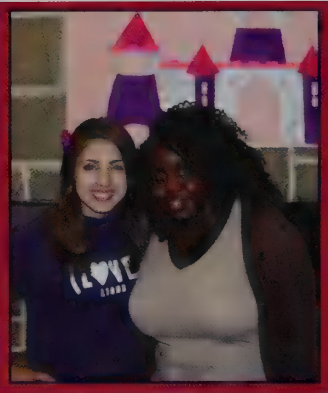
~Sarah Bradley

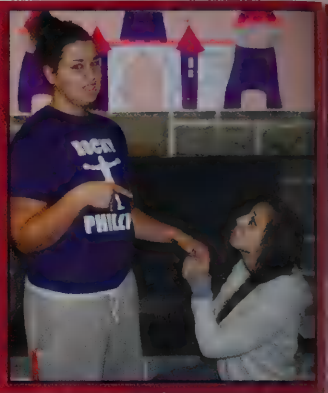




BIG SISTER little SISTER

Ladies, lets be real, college is a crazy time. What with guy friends, boyfriends, just friends, kind-of-more-than friends, and the ever-popular "its complicated". With all this man business going on, it can be hard to remember that in the end, it is your soul sistahs who are there for you no matter what. To help spread the sisterly love, each year the upperclassmen women "adopt" an incoming freshman as their "Little Sister." For the first few weeks of the fall semester these secret sisters leave notes of encouragement, gifts of candy and chocolate, and create posters proclaiming how awesome their Little Sisters are. When its finally time for the BIG reveal (get it?! like... big sister..), Bigs make their way to their Littles dorm room to surprise them with a final gift and an escorted jaunt to the Big Sister Little Sister party where they hang out with each other, play some games, have fun pictures taken, and maybe even sing a little Karaoke. So ladies, while guys are great, lets just remember that its your sisters who are going to be there when you want to watch the Notebook and eat a gallon of ice cream or go have heart-to-heart makeover nail-painting sleepovers. And they probably are not going to forget your birthday or make you play call of duty.





sisters before misters!

"New students really appreciate knowing that someone cares about them and is praying for them. I loved being a big sister and having the opportunity to be that person and make their new experiences of ENC more inviting."

Sammie Jones

"Having a big sister was awesome. As a Freshman, you are coming in with only stories about college and it can be a scary thing. My big sister was very relatable. She was helpful in getting me settled in to school, even letting me borrow her books from when she was a freshman. I will definitely be someone's big sister for the next school year."

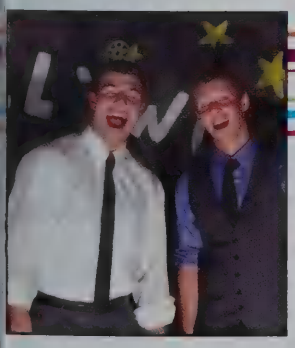
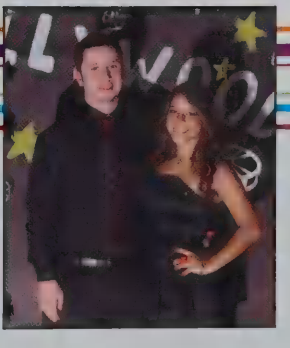
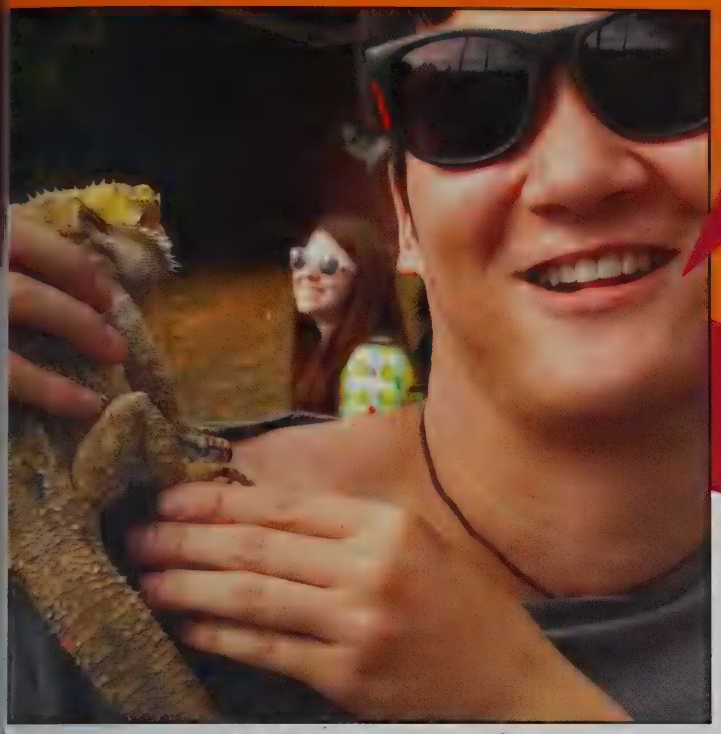
Homecoming Court 2012

Each year we vote for five ladies and five gents to become our Homecoming Court. Of course we only pick the classiest, fanciest, and most regal of our seniors to do the job, and I think we nailed it guys. With King Chima Ezeigbo and Queen Ketura Moise leading the way, these ten royals showed us all how noble they could be by making a video of themselves dancing to "Gangnam Style" and they did not hesitate to show off those dance moves at the Homecoming Coronation. Royals and commoners alike got the chance to shake it like a Polaroid picture, have caricatures done, get some henna, and have their picture taken. All in all it was a night worth remembering, and no offense to future ENG-ers, but we've got the dance moves on lock-down.





HOMECOMING STREET FAIR 2012



Hey little buddy... where do you think YOU'RE going?

I'm gonna buy some cider... only got 20 dollars in my pocket.

So, you've come back to the Naz, set up your room and have gotten in to the swing of classes. Just when you think life couldn't get any better, BAM!, there's Homecoming Week to bring you a whole new level of Naz-mania! Yeah, I said Naz-mania.

One of the token Homecoming Week activities is the Homecoming Street Fair where different groups on campus sell all sorts of fun things like apple cider, banana bread, books, choir CDs, cake-pops and various other baked goods. This year featured a booth where campus personalities such as Dr. Massey and SGA president, Payne Ford were pied in the face. The Animal Caretakers Society let you hold a spikey yellow lizard. It was a beautiful day where people got together to celebrate the fall season and have a good ole' time with friends.

SUPERHERO DAY

Let's be honest, as a college student you don't get too many opportunities to dress like a hooligan, so when ENC-ers get that chance... they take it. Throughout spirit week, you could see people walking through the Mann Center in capes, head-to-toe ENC paraphernalia, and floral umbrellas. Honestly, what brings people together more than five days of costumed madness? Nothing, I tell you. Nothing.

So, when you're looking back on this and you've got your serious job with your serious mortgage, remember that you used to strut around campus in a Batman cape.

HOLY STRAWBERRIES, BATMAN! WE'RE IN A JAM!

harvest party

Halloween: the one day of the year that it is socially acceptable to accept candy from strangers. To celebrate this autumn holiday, SGA put on a party that included pumpkin painting, pumpkin bowling, costumes, and you guessed it... CANDY. It was a diabetic nightmare in Hebrews where bowl upon bowl of candy sat to be eaten by happy ENC-ers dressed as superheroes, princesses, and even the Avengers showed up. It was a divergence from the usual SGA scare walk, and it provided an opportunity for people to celebrate without having the crap scared out of them.

"It was such a blessing to be part of such a fun and dedicated cast. We had a blast dancing and laughing our way through the show and I can't imagine ending my time at ENC with a more amazing musical."

-Paige Wetzel

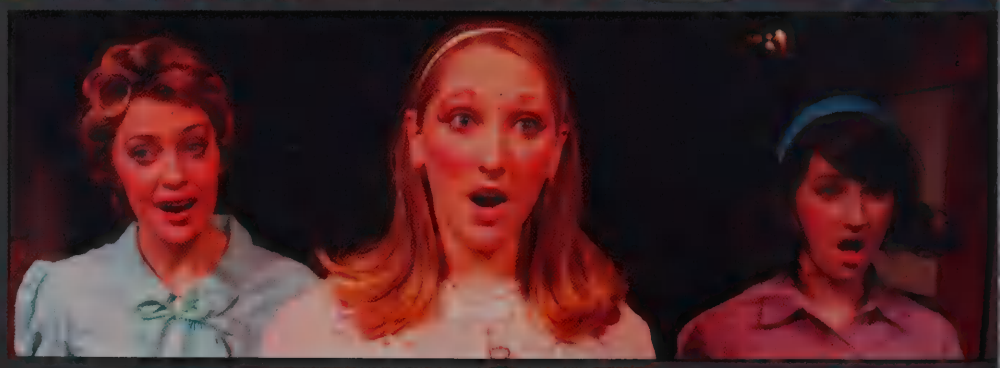
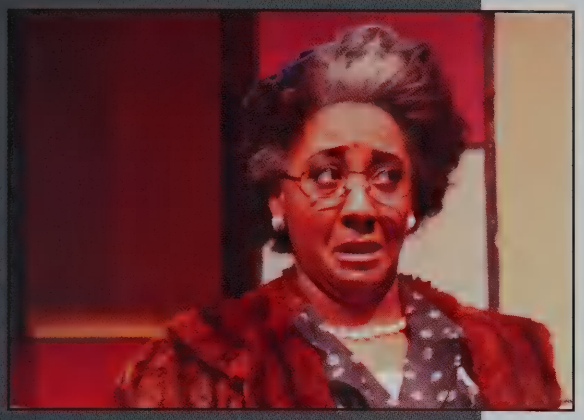
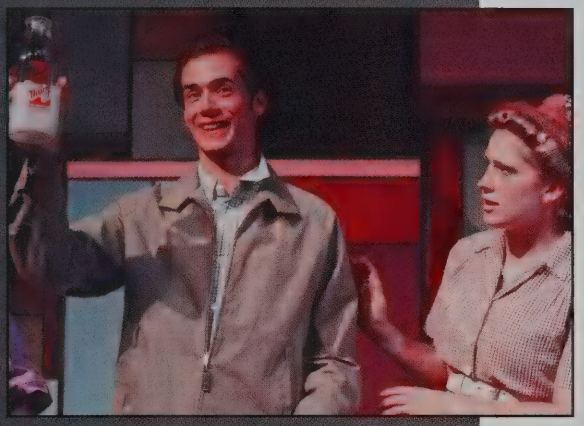
BYE BYE BIRDIE







Did you say... Condrad Birdie?! [Cue dramatic swoon]. That's right, this years musical was Bye Bye Birdie, and it was a whole basket of 1950's craziness. With an A-list cast that included David Burley as Conrad Birdie, Paige Wetzel as Kim McAfee, Jon Cahill as Albert Peterson and Athena Horton as Rosie DeLeon, this musical was fun, energetic, and filled with raging, screaming, teenage-girl hormones. People came from near and far to see this production, and they were not disappointed.

According to cast members, the show was just as much fun to perform as it was for the audience members to watch. "This show was filled with such high energy that you can't help but be swept up in it all! We would leave each night exhausted but with giant smiles on our faces. How could you not?", said one cast member when asked about performing. If you talk to any of them, you will most likely get stories of exhausting rehearsals, lessons in acting maniacally happy, and the crazy backstage antics that went down. Apparently there's some inside joke revolving around the last musical number, "Rosie" but the cast is staying very tight-lipped about it.

Whether you were onstage or in the audience, this show was one that will not be soon forgotten. With a set that was as colorful as the cast (set design by Michael Ballard), and a director who brought the Baby Boom era to life (Tara Brooke Watkins), this show was unforgettable. You know you were singing "We Love You Conrad" under your breathe for days afterward and you couldn't help but slip a few "gee wiz" comments into every day conversations.

Ahhhh... Christmas. Here at the Naz we like to celebrate the season with sugar cookies piled with enough icing to put a person into a coma and the ugliest Christmas sweaters we can find. Hey, it might not be the traditional mom and pop affair, but did we ever say we do things the normal way? We ENC-ers are very particular about our yearly Christmas parties and this year's soiree did not disappoint. It was filled with music, cookies, card-writing, and hot cocoa. Most importantly, we had the chance to see Santa and his wifey and tell him what we wanted for Christmas. I know... you're really jealous. It's okay, you can live vicariously through your A-list friends who were there.

WINNER!

This years executive SGA decided to do away with one of ENC's most loved events, Nazi Idol, and replace it with The Voice. And it was nothing short of incredible! Contestants sang their hearts out to a full-house for all three shows.

In the opening round, the eight contestants waited nervously for the judges to pick via a lots of button-pushing and chair spinning. Once placed on teams, each singer had the chance to work with their coach one-on-one and prepare songs that would move them through the rounds and ranks and into stardom. All with the hopes of making it through the battle round to win the title of ENS'S VOICE and cash the $200.00 prize.

As you can see, it was practically a mob scene as people scrambled to be apart of Voice history. Everybody knew it was the musical event of the year and people were fighting tooth-and-nail to get a front row seat to the show.... I mean, look at them? What a bunch of animals.

Your boo wants to celebrate the Valentine's Day season in style. Let me tell you fellas... If you're going to treat your lady right, take some hints from the folks who brought the Sweetheart's Dinner to ENC. To help young men impress their women this year, JUMP Drama Ministry put on a swanky dinner, complete with a three-course meal, classy music, Koolaid, fake candlelight, and a photo booth. Nothing proclaims your affections like a glass of cherry-red Koolaid shimmering in the electric light of Spange Parlor.

Now, for those of you who are gagging at the thought of a room full of couples with stars in their eyes playing footsie, fear not! This dinner was much more than some run-of-the-mill couples affair. There were friend dates, double dates, random dates and even some bro-dates. Whatever kind of date you were on, it was an awesome way to celebrate the season of assorted chocolates and cheesy Hallmark cards. We know how to do Valentines Day right here at the Naz .

Despite the fact that phones and laptops were dying left and right, Nemo could not keep us from our social media!

This is the perfect weather to train my new sled dog team. Iditarod 2014!! – Meghan Holden

Homies are in survival mode over here at the Naz! – Jessica Silencieux

Historic blizzard. No power. Fire alarms at 6am. Roommate breaking down a door. At least it'll be a good story one day. – Brent Neely

Just took a shower by flashlight. It was exciting. – Kelsey Shoulla

Still have no power. Nemo should have stayed lost. – Shannon Dries

At school and power is still not back on but we r still able to worship God as a community. Having some worship time in the parlor with so many students and its beautiful. – Lisabeth Almeida

The best snowball war ever!! – Chima Ezergbo

The lights come on! Feral screams of joy all across campus...dancing in the hallway. Forget quiet hours, we have heat!!!! – Chelsie Maynard

YOU THINK YOU CAN DO THESE THINGS BUT YOU JUST CAN'T, NEMO!

7:00pm
Impromptu two hour student worship service in Spange Parlor

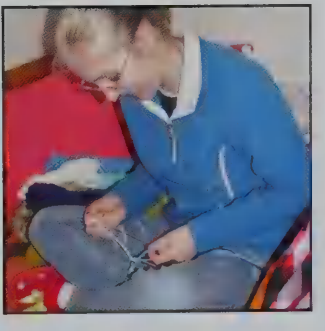
11:00pm
LIGHT'S! HEAT!
PRAISE THE LORD!

i think we found NEMO.

We didn't just find Nemo... we were smothered by him. This years big snow storm hit with a fury and with it came a whole lot of craziness. The heat and electricity were out for over 24 hours, not to mention the lack of warm water; they even cancelled classes for TWO days (you know it's serious when ENC administration is calling it quits). Frigid ENC-ers huddled under all of the clothing they could fit on their bodies and battled out the storm in a variety of ways. Some bravely trekked out to play in the snow, while others pulled out their illegal candles for warmth. Some decided they were not going to stick around in the frigid dorms and just left. Rumor has it that some students used this time without electricity to hide in sneaky places and terrify their unsuspecting roommates. In a show of ENC resilience, there was even an impromptu worship service held in Spange Parlor.

No matter how you made it through, we are all survivors of Nemo and I think we deserve some sort of award for that... at least a sticker or something. We here at Nautilus don't have "I survived Nemo" stickers, but what we do have are blank pages with which to celebrate your college journey, so, here's your chance to trade war stories as you look back at the storm that turned you into a hardened survivalist.

"I'll always remember that this was a great weekend even though we didn't have power or heat. There were a lot of good laughs, and almost getting 6 people stranded while driving from one side of Quincy to the other completely on E searching for gas was crazy!"
-Ace Carradine



To make the valentine season complete (along with the Sweethearts dinner), this year SGA rented out an ice skating rink for Valentines Day morning. This gave the good students of the Naz the opportunity to go all Michelle Kwan in front of their crush and hopefully woo them with their mad skating skills. Of course, for some of us, going all "Michelle Kwan" actually meant clinging to the walls for dear life and trying not to take other people out. In the end it didn't matter if you looked like an olympian or that kid who needs the milk crates, it was fun for everyone involved.

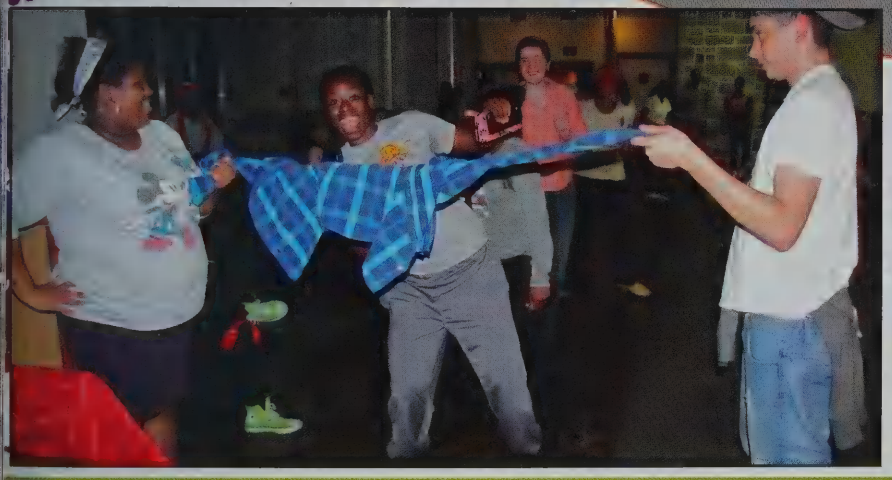
90's Party

2013 edition.



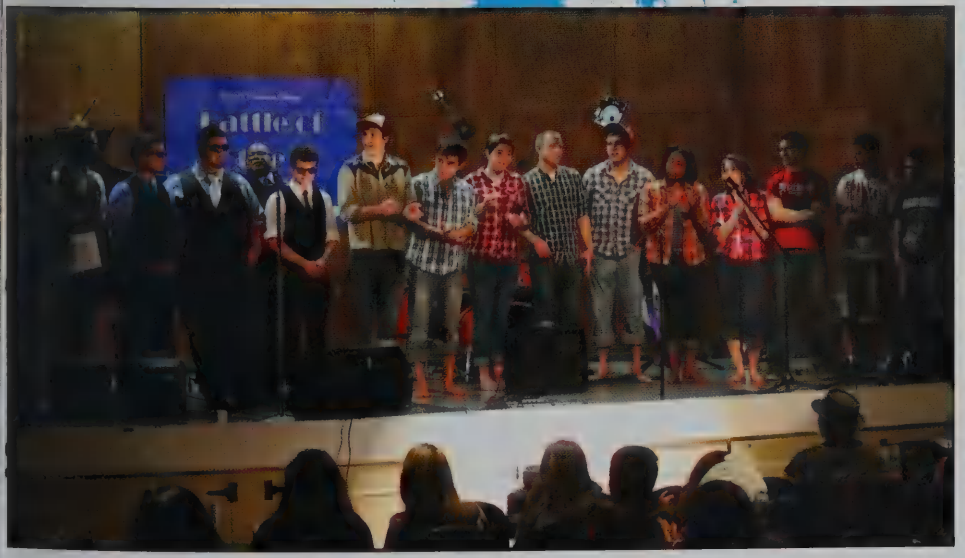
Oh the 90's... They don't do parties like they did when Vanilla Ice and the Spice Girls were blasting out the speakers. This year we had the opportunity to relive those glory days with ENC's 90's Party. With a perfect mixture of cheesy 90's awesomeness and junk food, this shindig was rocking into the night. Everyone was steppin' out in their cut off denim jackets, and swishy pants with sweatshirts tied around their waists to sing and dance to the likes of N'SYNC and Bell Biv DeVoe. It kind of looked like a casting session for an episode of Boy Meets World. Is there any better way to spend an evening? I think not.

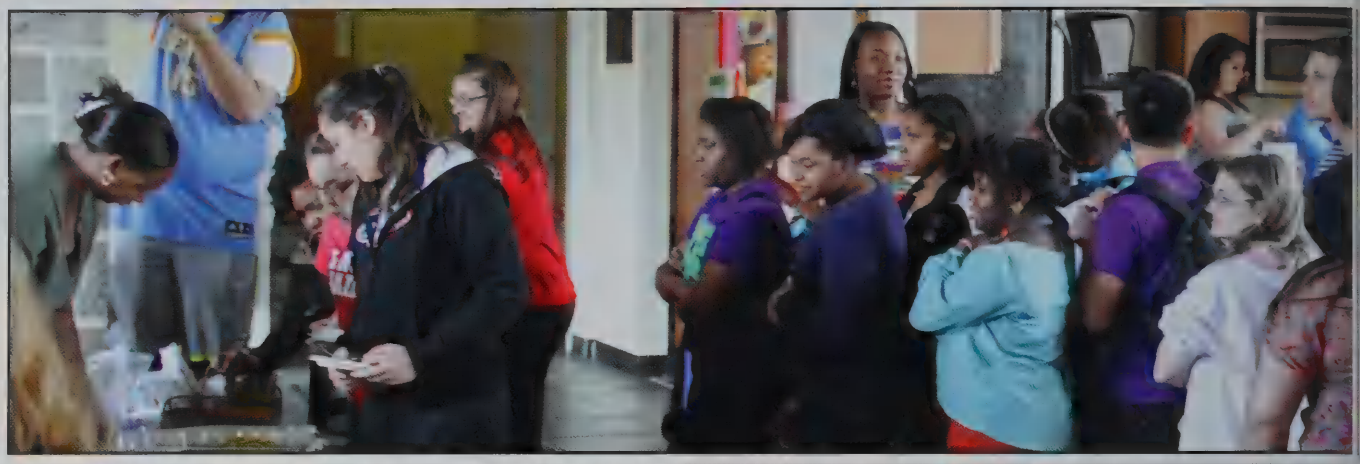
BATTLE OF THE BANDS!

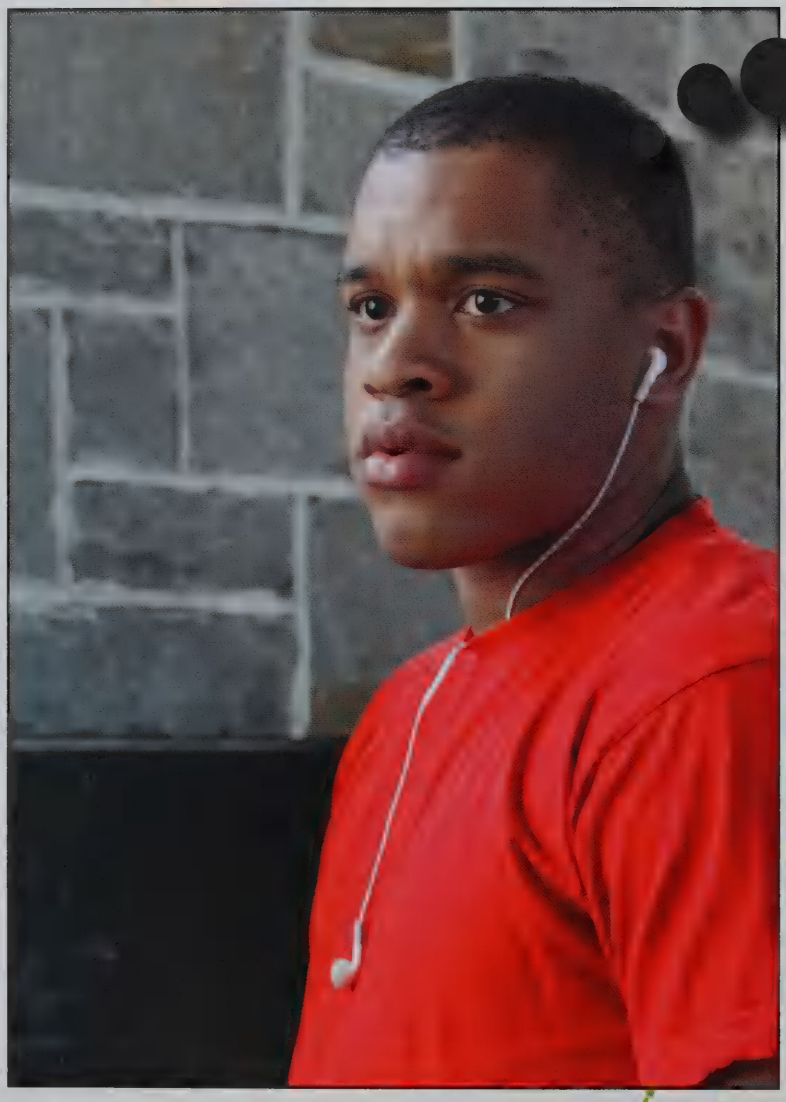
the CHAMPS.

WE WILL ROCK YOU! Sorry for the cheesy starting line but this page is too hard-core not too have one. What it really needs is a grunge rock song playing in the background so you know we mean business; too bad we don't have a singing card-type deal for these pages. Anyway, this years Battle of the Bands was one full of some great musical combat.

With a prize of $200 in the balance, bands came together to strut their musical stuff and show the campus what they got, and it brought down the house. While everyone fought valiantly, it was the "Honey Smacks" that landed the win and the two hundred buckaroos. There hasn't been that much musical shredding in that auditorium since Dr. Massey donned a cat-suit to play the drums. IT WAS EPIC.







OH MAN...

I HOPE THERE ARE SECONDS.

CULTUREfest

As the title of the page suggests, this event was a festival and celebration. The Office of Multicultural Affairs and ALANA put on this dinner for students to gather together and share in cuisine that was as diverse as the students and faculty here at ENC. It was a wonderful time to get together and fellowship with others on campus, talking, laughing, and eating. I mean, lets be honest, there is nothing that brings college students together like the promise of food, especially if that food did not come out of a can or have to be heated up in a microwave. At any rate, ALANA did a wonderful job of bringing the people of campus together to celebrate how awesome we all are.

Can ya dig it?

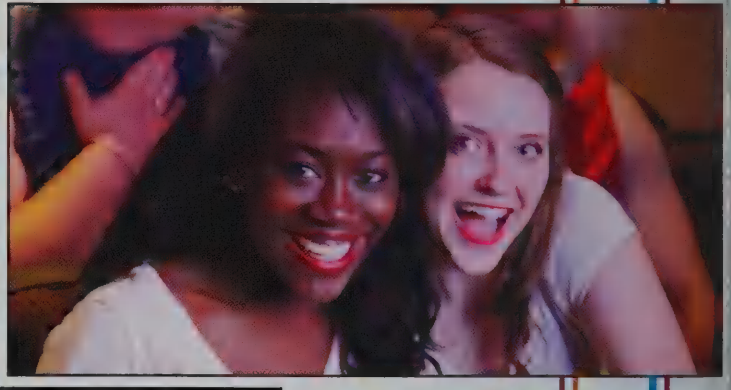
LIP SYNC

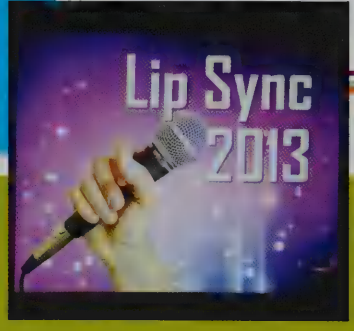
"So, this is the future of the Nazarene Church?" Those were the words that humourously escaped VP of Student Development and Lip Sync judge, Vern Wesley, as "Team Fatty" stepped into the spotlight to see what the three judges had to say about their "tongue dancing."

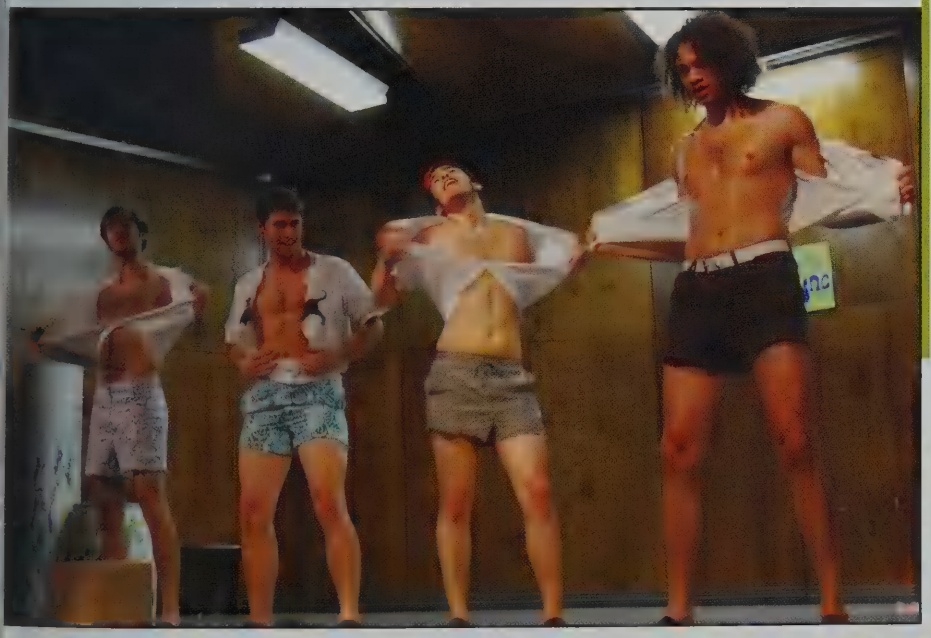
Wesley Paul wows the crowd with his sporadic, arm-flailing, dance moves of wonder.



WHY DON'T YOU DO SOMETHING?

The members of ENC's newly elected 2013 Student Government invited students to get involved globally by teaming-up with Bottle Aid. Bottle Aid is working towards the eradication of human trafficking in Africa, one bottle of soda at a time.





BEST FRIENDS

For the past 3 years these roommates and "Best Friends" have taken home the trophy at ENC's annual Lip Sync. Their synchronized dance moves, black-light, and body-paint routines always have the audience standing on their feet clapping and laughing hysterically. Next years competitors have some big shoes to fill!

SPRUNG!

SPRING FEVER week

The birds are chirping, the flowers are blooming; it's like a Disney movie, except without all of the singing woodland animals. It's SPRING TIME my friends! And nothing brings in spring like Spring Fever Week here at ENC!

With such events as Lip Sync, Kingdom Experience, The Octagon, and Spring Fever Day, ENC students welcomed the season with a bang! I mean, how else would we celebrate if not with lawn games, shirtless-dancing-men, some good ole' Jesus-worshippin', and cotton candy? Every year we look forward to emerging from dorm room hibernation to get some fresh spring air and have fun, and this year was definitely a hit. Kudos, SGA, and thanks for bringing us a whole week of spring-y wonderment.

Junior SENIOR

Junior Senior is like prom but without all of the awkward high school-style dancing and tacky dresses. It gives juniors and seniors a chance to get together for an awesome evening of good food, friends, and this year even included some dramatic imitations of ENC professors. We will never forget the fun that was had posing at the photo booth and talking with friends, and we certainly won't forget Paige Wetzel's rousing rendition of Dr. LaFountain.

Blue Honey
Beekeepers in France were puzzled when their honey was emerging from the combs in blue and green tints. The culprit was found to be contamination from an M&M factory.

Policeman Chases...Himself
An operator saw a suspicious man on the streets of Sussex England and called in the help of an undercover policeman. For twenty minutes, the operator was giving the policeman directions until they realized that the suspicious character was the policeman himself.

TOP NEWS STORIES

Reelection of President Obama.

After many months of intense and tumultuous campaigning, the people of America watched with baited breath as the results of the election were broadcasted. The announcement of Obama's second term was met with very mixed reactions.

Hurricane Sandy.

This storm hit the east coast with a force that decimated homes, businesses, and historical monuments, including the famous Jersey Shore. The flood waters travelled into the streets of New York and parts of the city was closed down for close to a week. Even here in Quincy people were walking down to Wolly to see the water which flooded Quincy Shore Drive in some sections.

Sandyhook Elementary.

In one of the most tragic events of the last decade, twenty-one children and adults were shot and killed at Sandyhook Elementary School in Connecticut. This tragedy claimed so many innocent lives and the event struck the heart of all Americans.

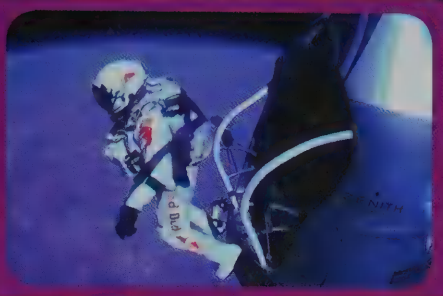
Boston Marathon Bombing.

Marathon go-ers and TV audiences everywhere were shocked and terrified as two bombs erupted at the finish line during the Boston Marathon. The culprits, two brothers from Russia, terrorized Boston for a week before one brother was killed in a firefight and the other brought into custody...

The End of the World... oops

People were on edge in 2012 as we awaited the end of the Mayan Calendar. Like any good end-of-the-world situation, some people kind of lost their minds. The Mayans are having a good chuckle over this one...

POP CULTURE



Livestrong... Or maybe it's Live-roided?

Lance Armstrong, the face of cycling and inspiration for the cancer community, was discovered to have taken performance-enhancing drugs. He was stripped of all awards, including his 7 Tour de France titles.

Honey Boo Boo Child.

A little girl nick-named Honey Boo Boo swept the TV screen and the American people through a reality show called Here Comes Honey Boo Boo. It seems America is now supporting mass exploitation of children...

The Ultimate Underdog Story.

After twenty years of the Today Show dominating the ratings, Good Morning America finally pulled ahead and won its first months-sweep victory in a very long time.

Rolling In The Dough.

This year Adele broke a records by being the first female artist to have three different singles in the Top 10 of the Billboard Top 100. You go girl.

Apparently Red Bull really does give you wings.

Thrill seeker Felix Baumgartner broke the record for highest free-fall jump at 24 miles above the Earth; this in a pressurized space suit. This Red Bull funded stunt amazed all who watched as Baumgartner careened to the Earth at 833 miles per hour.

"The power went off around 10pm the Friday when Nemo hit. Since most of the animals are reptiles, they require an external warmth in order to regulate their own temperatures. We spent the following 24 hours with the animals, and without sleeping. We had rotating cuddling sessions with each animal to keep them warm, and alive.... You know, 3 years ago I would've refused to touch any of the animals we care for, let alone cuddle with them, but there comes a point when you realize how helpless they are, and that they are relying on you to live. That's when you realize, that they may not be fluffy, but they're still pretty darn cute."

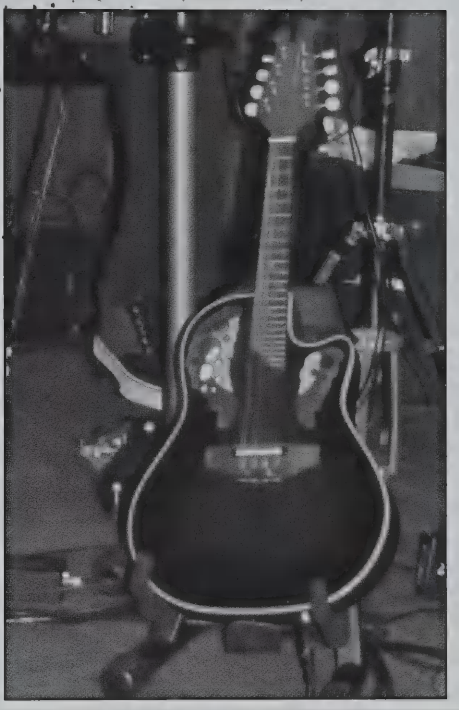
RONAN'S BAND

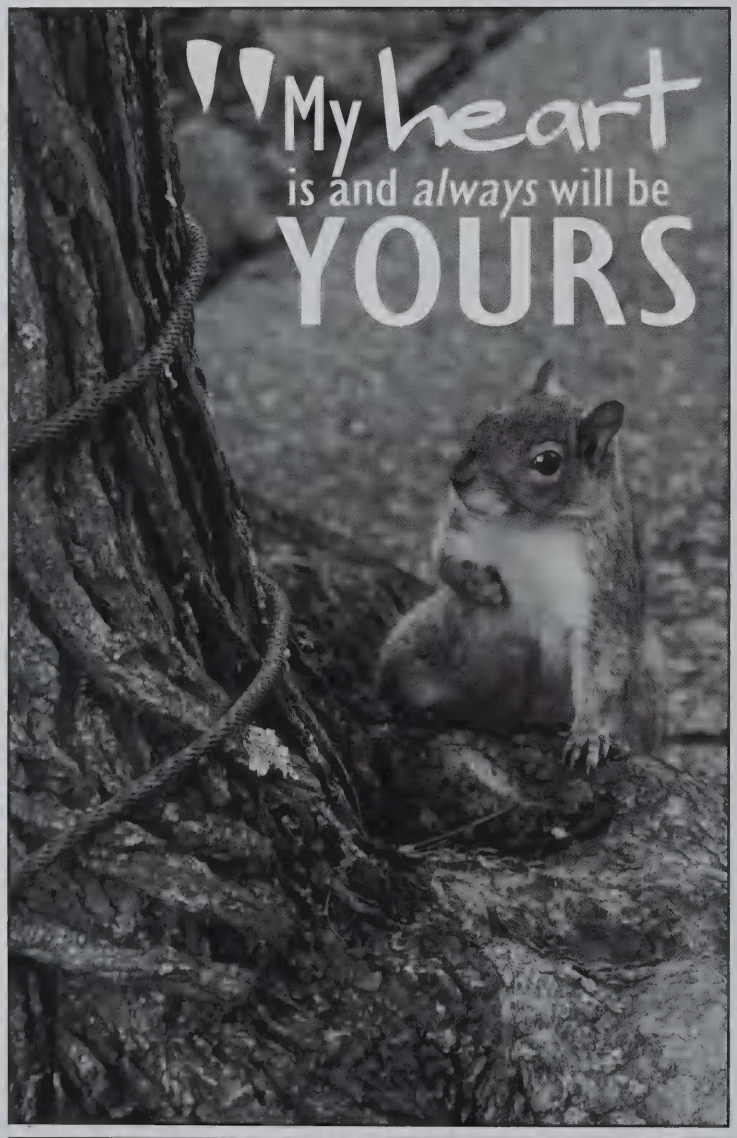
One of ENC's favorite students and graduating senior, Ronan Storer, performs in Hebrews Cafe during "Music of the Night" with his nameless-band.



"The last three years here at ENC have been a blessing to me. I was able to freely seek God at my own pace and have had so many people who walked alongside me and helped me find God's Grace, love, and peace in this process. Thank you, to all the faculty and students, you have made a difference in my life which I will never forget."

-Ronan Storer

THIS ONE'S FOR THE SQUIRRELS



We've all seen them, scurrying about campus. Popping out of trash cans at unexpected moments, clinging to our window screens covered in ketchup when we pull up the shade in the morning. Sitting huddled under a tree, possessively gripping a whole muffin.

Where did they get a whole muffin?

Maybe you were fortunate enough to be one of the lucky kids sitting quietly on a bench in front of Wolly, minding your own business, when all of a sudden you find yourself being approached (within inches) by a fearless, gray, ball of fur. Don't challenge them. They don't back down.

ENC squirrels. They're a special breed that call 23 East Elm Avenue home. As much as they creep us out, they also entertain us. We all talk about them and point them out to friends and family when they're visiting campus.

Let's face it, these squirrels are an important part of ENC, and the Nautilus staff felt it was about time they had their own spread in the yearbook.

So enjoy this. Sit around a campfire, crack open your yearbook and swap old squirrel stories with your classmates. You know you have at least one!

The reason why ALANA is so close to my heart is because it speaks louder than I ever could about what I truly believe and stand for. It allows people from different cultures, races, and ethnicities, to come together to learn, grow, and celebrate our differences. GERMANTOWN

"Germantown is a wonderful way to find out you have a passion for children. It enables you to see just how much we can influence the next generation to always try their best and to never give up. Germantown is also a great way to show the love of Christ to the children involved who might have never experienced such a love. We encourage them to have perseverance and show them that they are worth more than they think because we love them almost as much as Christ does. Luke 18:15-17.

~Sondra Hazelton

personal Ministry
(the most important kind)

This here yearbook has been a lot of fun and games, mostly because we in the Nautilus office like both fun AND games, and we can at least laugh at ourselves if no one else does. While the funny stuff is great, we would be remiss if we did not remind you of the theme of this book; SEND ME. If you remember all the way back at the beginning of the yearbook, you'll recall that we threw down the gauntlet and challenged readers. We challenged you to go and be game-changers and difference-makers, and here we continue that challenge. As we wrap up the ministries portion of the book, we want you to remember that change, true God-driven change, starts in the realm of everyday ministry. We want you to be ministers to other people. This does not mean that you've got to trash your aspirations and run on down to the nearest seminary or fly off to Cambodia for 6 months to build houses, although these are wonderful things that are perfect for some. It doesn't even mean that you go Bible-thumping people left and right; it means that you take simple opportunities to love other people and to do what is right because that's how Jesus lived.

Your personal, day-to-day ministry is perhaps the most important that you can engage in. You may never get awards or monuments for your ability to write really nice birthday cards, but you can bet that the person who receives that card will not soon forget your kindness. While no one will write ballads about your paying for someone else's toll or your tendency to hold doors open for people, you will become the kind of person that your friends or children can look to for inspiration; and when you reach the pearly gates, at least you can feel a little better about having to sit down with God in a couple of gilded Adirondack chairs and answer for your actions.

This is just our long-winded way of saying that the most powerful ministry is the one that you adopt for your own life. Don't get to the end of your life full of regret about the things you could have done and the person you could have been. As Shakespeare once wrote; "Be not afraid of greatness; some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." And greatness is not measured by whether or not we were written about in a history book, or whether we ever got an award for such-and-such an action. Every single one of us has the ability to be great in our own lives; we just have to be willing to fight for it with each interaction we have and decision we make.

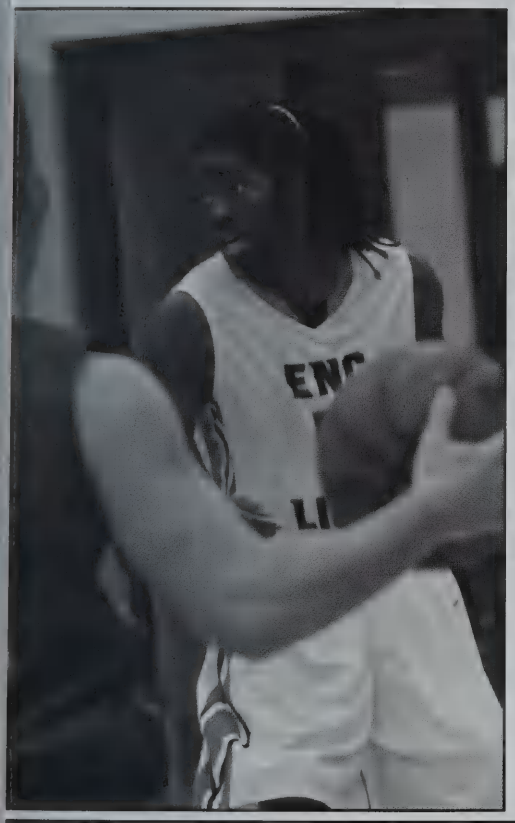
MEN'S BASKETBALL



"WE HAD AN AMAZING SEASON! FROM OUR SENIORS TO OUR FRESHMAN! I'M GLAD I COULD HELP BRING THE LIONS BACK TO THEIR WINNING WAYS AND I KNOW IT WILL CONTINUE! THANKS TO ALL THE STAFF, FACULTY, AND MOST IMPORTANTLY THE STUDENTS FOR THEIR SUPPORT."

~ Chima Ezeigbo

"Hard work pays off."

- Shardae Brown

"Basketball has meant the world to me, not only for the past four years, but my entire career. I fell in love with the game at 11 years old and never looked back. But over the past four years my teammates have meant the most to me. I literally love each and every one of them and they all have a special place in my heart. Team is family and I truly consider them all to be just that. The friendships I've built with each and every one of them will be what we remember. Not the wins and losses, the practices or mistakes. It'll be the laughter, the smiles, the arguments, the crying, and the sheer joy that each brought to my life at one time or another. Basketball at ENC not only made me a better player but a better person and leader. It's been challenging, frustrating, and sometimes out-right annoying, but all worth it! Thanks to everyone who supported us and for all of the love!"

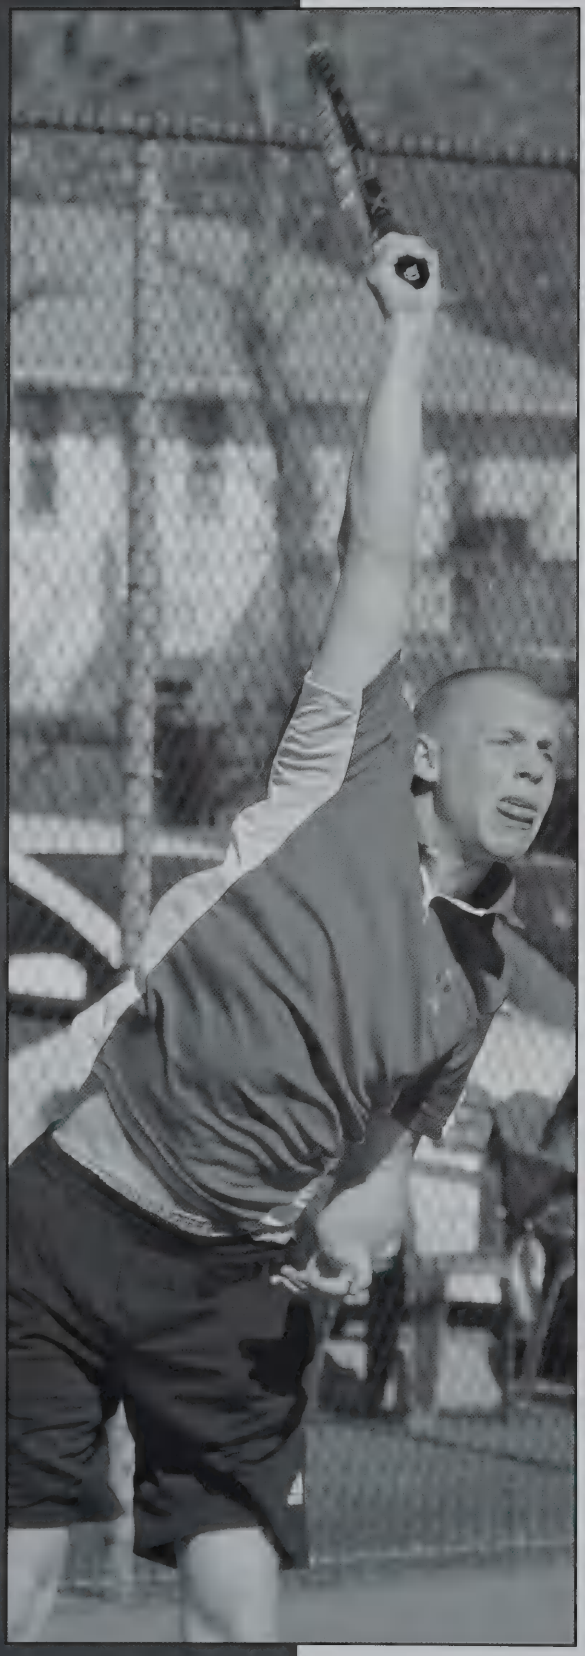
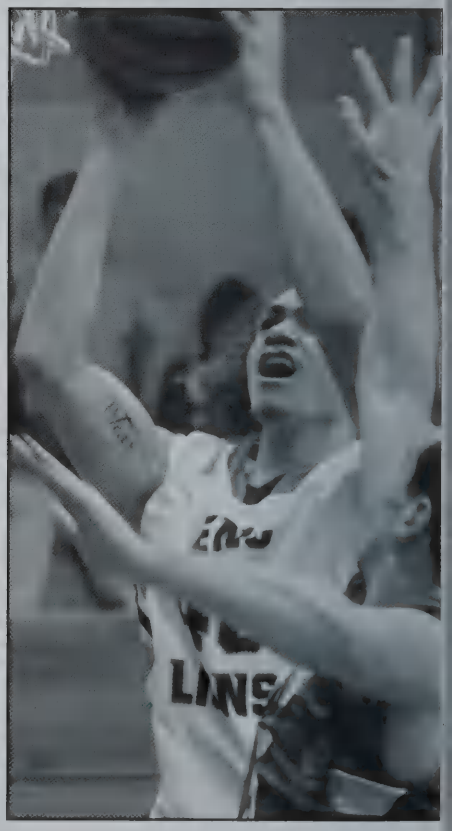
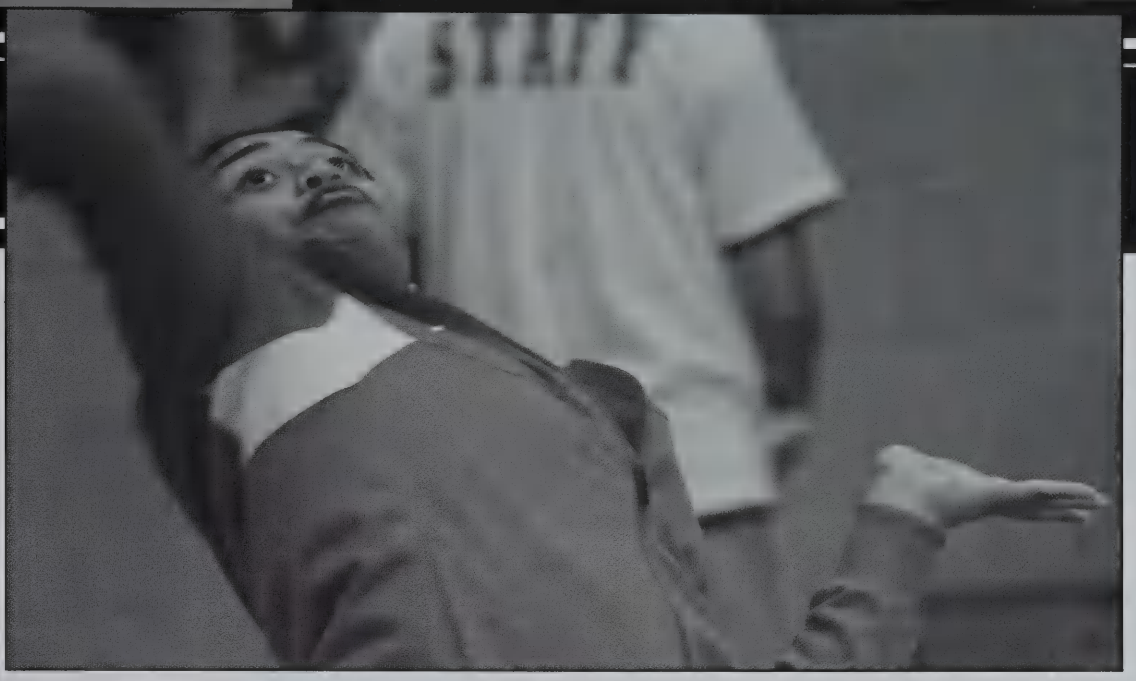
GAME FACES







Here at the Nautilus, we have the odd job of going through thousands of pictures to select the gems that will end up on the pages of your yearbook. We know that ya'll try your darnedest to make sure all the pictures that we take are Profile-Pic material, but I have to break it to you--sometimes you look pretty funny. While we get a good one here or there among the many that are taken during events, it has become abundantly clear to us that athletes frequently make some seriously weird faces. Who knew that intensity out on the court or field could make for some photo-hilarity? We sure didn't, but now that we know, we felt it would be unfair to keep it to ourselves.

So, athletes, we commend your dedication and perseverance out on the fields and the courts, but even more than that, the Nautilus office would like to thank you for turning that into some in-office humor.

it's time for....

A new fad has emerged at ENC...

ENC SECRET ADMIRERS

Basically it's this thing on Twitter where people anonymously write nice things or secret crushes about others (awww). We have picked some of our favorites.

"M-- M-- working at Starbucks right now... I love a man in uniform!

"D-- M-- though? That's husband material.

"If you went to ENC and didn't crush on at least one person in each of your classes, you missed out on one of the key experiences."

"J-- A--... if you were a booger, I would pick you first."

"M-- K-- should receive a medal in manliness."

"C -- F -- is a diamond in the rough."

"P-- F -- Your eyes are like the stars, oh how they twinkle."

How do you spend a typical Friday night?

"I sit in my room and try to do homework and fail for about an hour. Then I go to Hebrews and try to study and EPICALLY fail. Then I give up and go watch a movie and do stupid stuff."

"Well, I begin my Friday nights by base jumping and then I start some forest fires. I finish the evening by sailing my yacht in Quincy Bay and sipping Shirley Temples."

"Umm... eating. And watching movies."

"Yeahhh... watching movies."

"Movies accompanied with a profane amount of eating."

If you could build a monument on campus, what would it be and why?

"Probably a fake tree in place of a real tree... with fake squirrels on it."

"Definitely jolly Severson with a leprechaun hat."

"A McLiger... Like, a body of a liger but the head transforms into the face of President McGee."

"A lion fountain with the lions roaring mouth spouting water. Right in the middle of campus."

What's the best excuse you've ever given for not doing an assignment?

"I didn't realize the handout was two-sided."

"My brother choked on a chicken wing."

"Printer broke... I mean, my internet wasn't connecting."

"I save it in a format that I know they can't open. It usually buys me two more days."

"I didn't feel like it. (legit)"

"I forgot to attach the assignment to the email a week ago..."

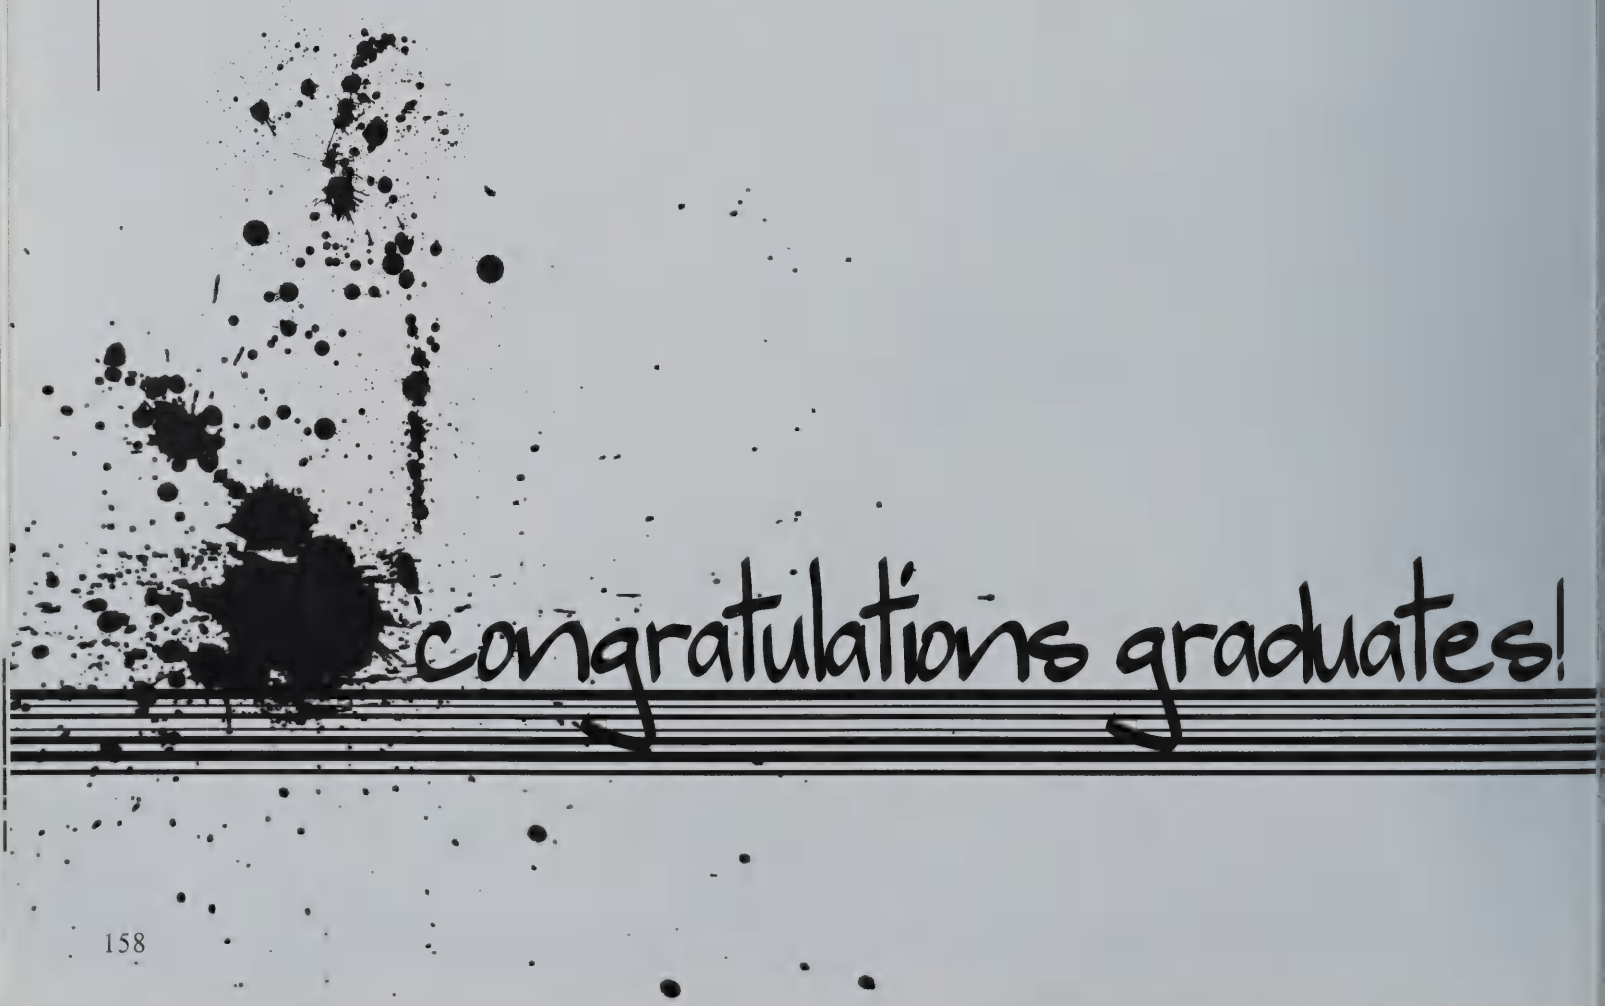
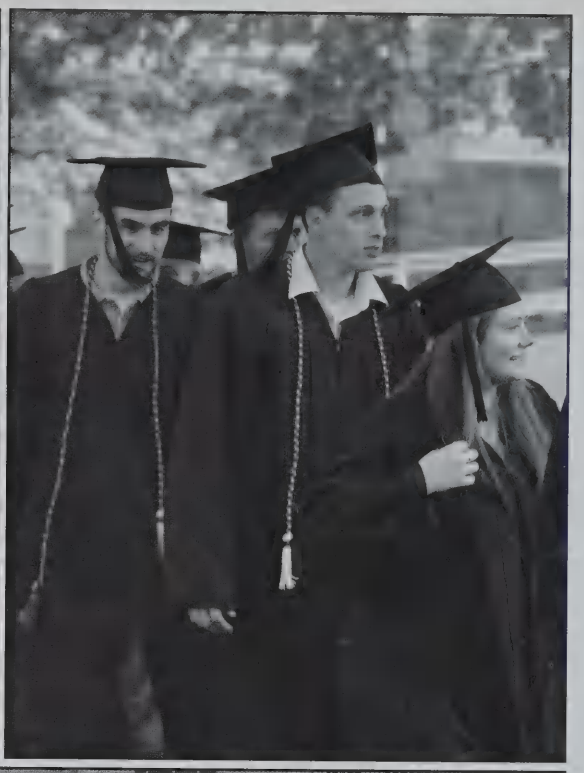
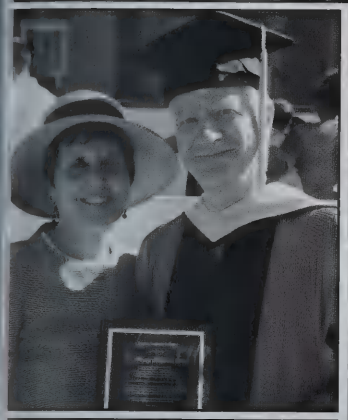
For four years you have labored, pulled all-nighters, crammed, text-booked, and note-carded your way to that graduation stage. You've paid your balances, returned your library books, and passed all of your finals. Then you find yourself left standing unbelievingly with cap and gown in hand. As you leave Gardner with your regalia, half expecting someone from the Registrar to come after you and take it back, you realize that there are only days separating you from the title of "Alumni". Then you step INTO that cap and gown and stand in front of the mirror wide-eyed, thinking, WHAT IS GOING ON? Before you know it you're shaking hands with Corlis McGee and you can hear your Great-Aunt Milly yelling your name in the crowd. And now... now we are grown-ups (what?!). It was a long time coming, my friends, and we are ready to step out into the world (or at least that's what they tell us). Enjoy this time, graduates, because it's your time to shine; and you better watch out world. Here we come!







ADVICE FROM THE SENIORS
to the underclassmen.

Now is the time to try new things. Be daring. Be different. Figure out who you really want to be. Ask questions. About life. About class. About the people around you. About things you care about. About what you believe. About yourself. And learn something from the answers. Remember that you know things. You have something to say and a viewpoint to contribute. But also remember that you don't know everything. It is more important to maintain a posture of openness and learning.

Get involved, get active, and create new ways to bring the ENC Community and the outside world together!

It is very important to realize that who you are is who you are. The people that love and accept you will know you for who you are and everyone else's opinion really just doesn't matter. I have learned to unapologetically be myself.

Be who you are as soon as possible. Being someone else is just a waste of time that you will never get back.

A strong, genuine friendship will teach you more than a library. With that being said, don't hide behind electronics and social media. Get to know people face to face. Really get to KNOW them. The good, the bad, and the ugly, and share what is good, bad, and ugly about you. Everyone has something to teach you, and vice versa. When you ask someone how their day is, actually CARE about how they're doing. If someone asks you, don't just say "fine". Let them know how you are really doing! Let people know how you feel! If you think someone is beautiful tell them! If someone sheds some light on a negative quality of yours, thank them! In conclusion I have not discovered how to do all this without getting hurt, however I've discovered it is the only way to truly learn.

"DON'T PLAY TONSIL HOCKEY IN DOORWAYS... IT GETS REAL AWKWARD."

Take any opportunity you can to do fun and creative things around campus; sports, clubs, theater, choirs, events, etc. This is a time when there is so much to do, and all of your best friends to do them with. Explore what you think you know and can do, because you will find there is so much more. Do not be afraid to speak out, take breaks, see people for their hearts, and open your own to God. Feel it out. Say No when you need to, and say YES to every possibility that interest you.

Let your years at college be a time of personal and spiritual growth. Always strive to be a positive influence on those around you. Sometimes the stress from classes, work, and personal issues may seem to break you, but in that breaking you can be made new.

College is one of the last times in your life when you will have the freedom, opportunity, and means to do just about anything. Take advantage of everything that is before of you: travel, spend time with people that you normally wouldn't, and take risks. Never forget that it is okay to procrastinate only if you procrastinate well! Just make sure that you understand how you work best. Do what you need to do to prepare for your exams and projects, and NEVER shy away from asking questions if you don't understand something. Most importantly, ALWAYS be mindful of who you go to for guidance. Many people have good intentions, but good intent does not a wise person make. Finally, "Be the change you wish to see in the world" -Mahatma Ghandi

"NEVER eat anything in the cafeteria if you cannot identify ALL of its parts"

Live with open hands. Cherish and give thanks for the beautiful people and experiences that you have each and every moment, but then be willing to let go. Sometimes if you hold onto something/someone for too long you miss out on other beautiful gifts offered by our Papa God. Above all, stop and give thanks for each moment, roommate, professor, and friend that touches your heart.

I urge you to follow your dreams. We're all young, we'll have time to settle down, we'll all be able to get a "regular" job but how many of us will be able to say that we did everything we could to make our biggest dream our reality? Do what you want, what makes you happy, because at the end of the day only you have to look in the mirror and be satisfied!

While the word Baccalaureate is unnecessarily long-winded and strange, fear not, we've got your back. A few of us have crossed the threshold of this event, and having come out on the other side we can confidently tell you about it.
This service is a time for graduates, their families and friends, as well as the faculty and staff of this community to come together to celebrate the accomplishments of the senior class. Chaplain Corey MacPherson spoke from the passage of John 21:1-19, charging students to reflect on the question, "Do you love Me?" Seniors, Chima Ezgeibo and Victoria Bolduc, shared testimonies of their time at ENC; highlighting lessons learned and moments when they felt the overwhelming presence of God. Not to mention the chocolate fountains, give-aways, and photo booth madness that happens after the service. Now that you've been let in on the secret, we hope that you will go forth and tell your friends what it's all about.

Letters to Home

Before they had the power of cell phones and wifi, students had to find ways to let their parents know they were still alive. So here are some excerpts from letters written for that purpose. You may find that we're not all that different from the students of yore.

On receiving a care package: "Everything tasted so good, after the food we get. Now don't get the idea that we don't have enough, cause we do! But I miss the variety so! Nothing but meat, gravy, potatoes; gravy, meat, potatoes; and potatoes, gravy, meat, all the time."

"It's so hard to get used to the rules. Every time you turn around you have to ask permission, almost."

"Our dormitory has a flat, railed roof, and some of the girls decided that they'd go up there to sleep not very long ago. Of course it was cold, but they took lots of coats and blankets, and prepared to stay awhile. But the dean heard them. Nuf sed."

"This is the lonesomest place on Sunday! I don't know what to do with myself and the afternoon is SO long. Most of the girls go to sleep during quiet hour, but I'm always so cross when I wake up and I don't want to do that. I forgot to tell you what 'quiet hour' is. It's another RULE, that says between three and four every Sunday afternoon you have to go to your room and be quiet."

""The boys flooded the tennis courts, and we even skated there in between times. They can't do anything but play hockey lately. Some of the girls are even falling in love with the game."

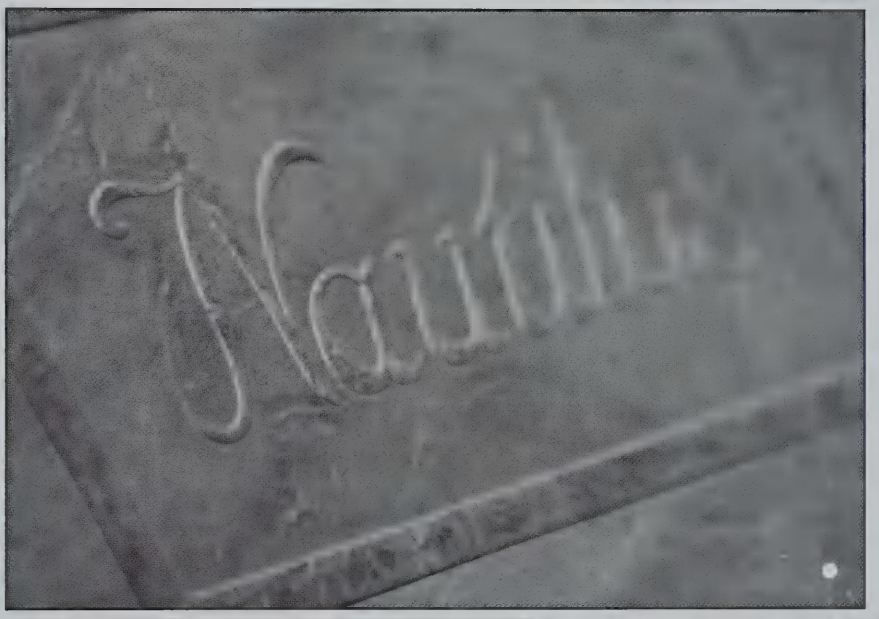
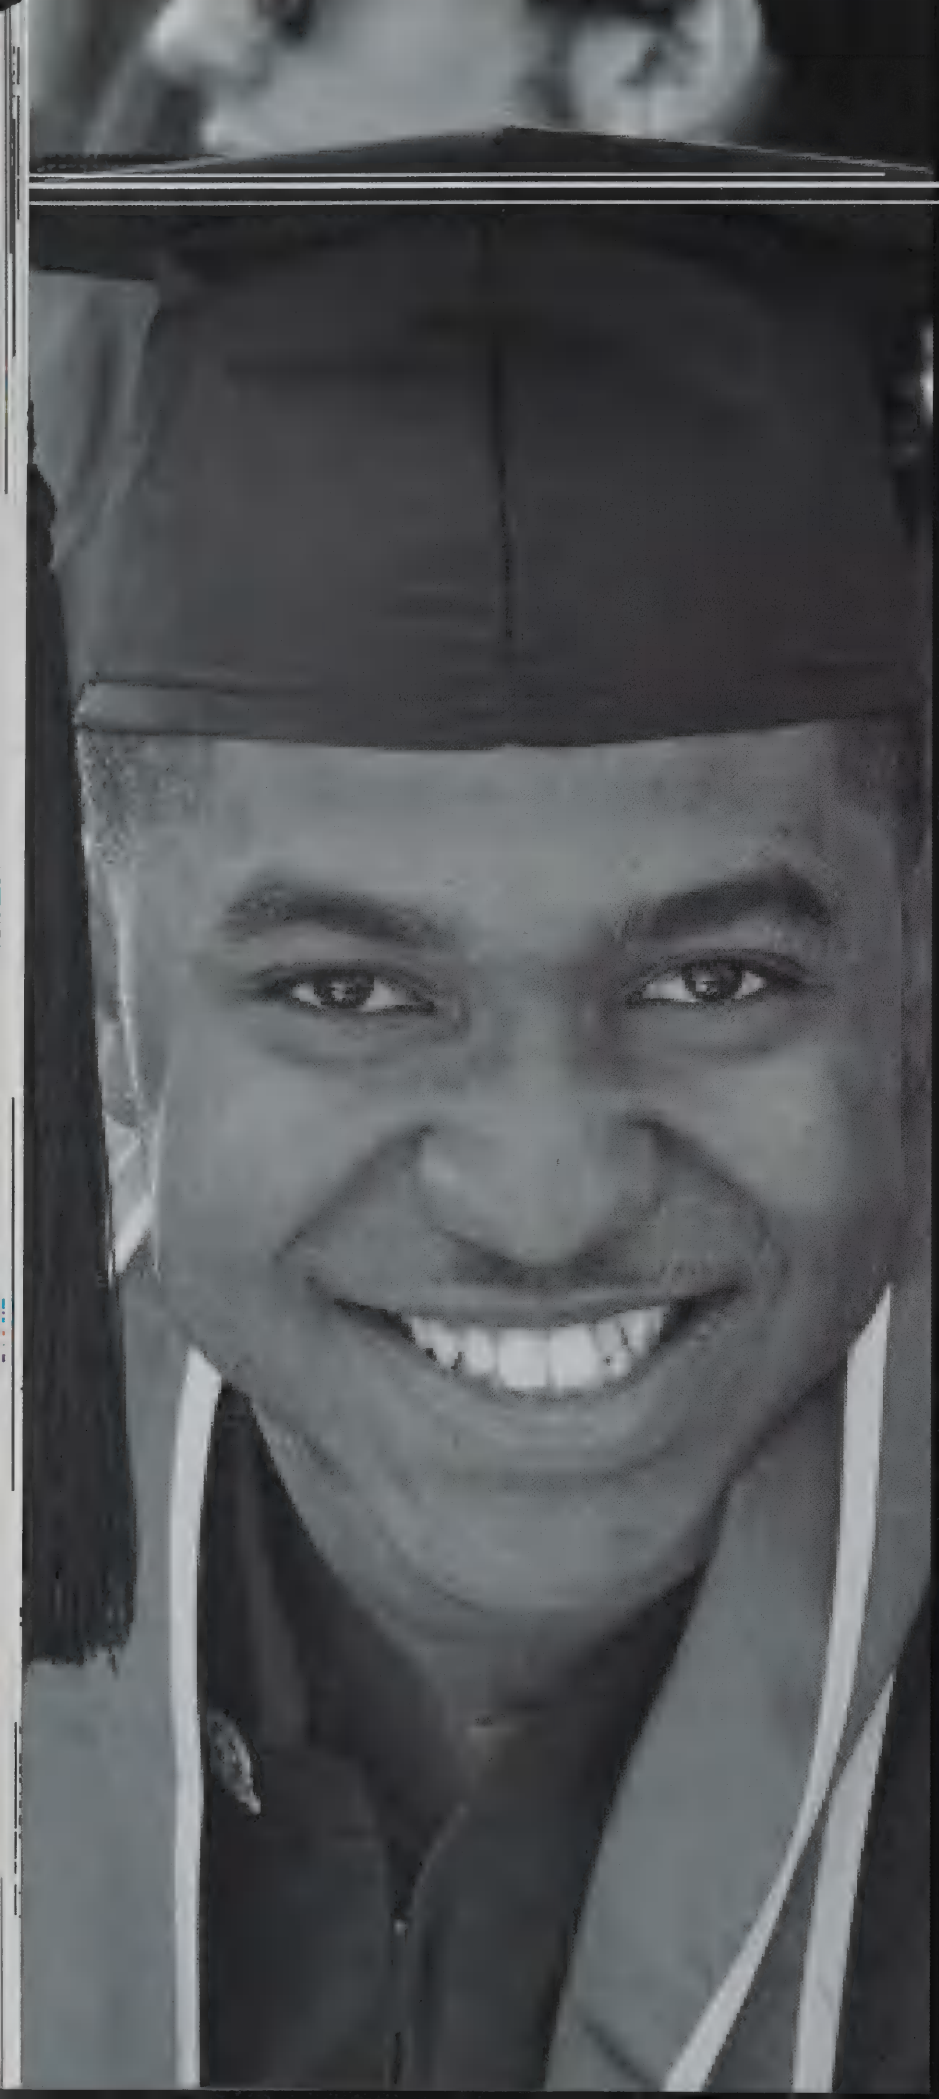
As you have now reached the end of the yearbook, I imagine that you are speechless with the majesty and sheer ingenuity of this here publication. It may surprise you to know that the yearbook was a much simpler undertaking back when the first Nautilus staff put one together. I mean, they didn't have the help of Photoshop or Indesign... or computers... or really any publication technology. Though, that doesn't mean the Nauti staff didn't get a little crafty with their scissors and glue.

For 91 years the Nautilus office has chronicled the memories and experiences of the ENC community, and we have every one of those yearbooks as proof. With these at hand, we decided to take a look back at the very first yearbook and share some of the highlights with you. While the layouts may not be mind-blowing, with such amenities as the "Students Speak" pages, we can tell that even then the ENC community was made up of a bunch of crazy cats. So, let's dig down deep into our roots and see how they did it way back in 1922.



IF ONLY LAYOUTS WERE STILL THIS SIMPLE...



business manager

Although I grew up in church, I hated Christian colleges for as long as I can remember. When it came time to apply for school during my senior year of high school, I applied to ENC and labeled it my "If all else fails" school. You can imagine my surprise when I ended up on this campus in late August of 2009. For those that knew of me at ENC, they distinctly remember that how I felt about attending this school was written all over my face. My face literally screamed "Why am I here??". Anybody that knew me during my freshmen year knew that I didn't want to be here and that I hated to be mistaken for my brother. To be honest, I strongly considered transferring at one point.

It wasn't until my junior year, that I realized the place I once hated with every fiber in my being became the place that I couldn't seem to detach myself from. From serving as Director of Publicity in Executive Student Government to being given the opportunity to travel across the region and outside the country to play worship music; the time and experiences that I've had at this school have been incredible. However, these moments fell short in comparison to the friendships that I built. In high school I wasn't the kid who had millions of friends. In fact, I could count my close friends on one hand (and maybe two fingers on the other). However, each person that I've come in contact with during my time at ENC has impacted my life in an unfathomable way.

During my junior year, I realized that ENC was a place where the friends that you have, love you for you. Despite your shortcomings and flaws you have the chance to discover who you are through the relationships that you build with people along the way. You have the opportunity to sharpen yourself and be challenged within those relationships. While high school was a time where I constantly had to defend my faith, my time at ENC was one where I had the opportunity to discover it.

Blessings,

Leonard

STORY.

We are all telling stories. Each morning when you wake up and take a shower, munch on your Raisin Bran Crunch, strap on your Chacos and go about your day, you're penning new words into the story of your life.

Donald Miller is one of my favorite authors. He wrote a book called A Million Miles In A Thousand Years. I've read it four times and I love handing it off to others to read and enjoy as much as I do. It's all about story. And life. And risk. And adventure. And God. This book inspires me to reflect on my life and decisions thus far and to think intentionally about where I want to be in the future.

What will I have to say to God when He asks me to tell Him the story of my life? Will it be a story that He is proud of? Will it be one He wants to hear again?

A story of love and service and walking with Jesus?

Miller explains that each of us are a living, breathing story. We are the pages and chapters of countless stories in motion. God has given us a chance to explore this world and He wants to journey alongside us as we jump into our stories; experiencing love and despair, victories and failures, to the fullest degree, right there with us.

I believe God has intended this life to be one of adventure and risk. Each of our stories will be different. Each of our adventures and risks will look different. What matters, is that we take those risks and we find those adventures. What matters is that we seek Yesu.

ENC has been a part of my story for the past four years. I have learned much and experienced wonderful things in my time here, and as the Layout Designer for the 2013 Nautilus I am privileged to share some of your stories and adventures. I hope this book holds for you, many memories of laughter and friendship. I hope this book holds only the beginning chapters to your story and the adventures that await you. Adventure is out there, and Yesu is waiting.

In the spirit of adventure,

Victoria

A LETTER from the Editor

I hate my iPhone. I honestly wish I could go down to Wolly, toss it in the bay, and walk away doing the Judd Nelson fist pump, Breakfast Club style. While that would make a pretty epic scene in the dramatic representation of my life, I would probably be in pretty big trouble when I didn't respond to an email telling me that I must do such-and-such or I would never EVER graduate (I've got three or four in my inbox right now). The emails, calls, and texts I receive through my phone are essential in keeping myself connected to my responsibilities, and I'll be honest; there are times that my phone has operated as a life-line in an obnoxiously boring class or two. All of these connections can be a wonderful tool, but they can also make me feel like I'm a dog on an extremely short and itchy leash. And I don't think I'm alone. Go out to an Olive Garden sometime and if you look around, you'll see couples and families all sitting at their respective tables with their noses in various devices. Most times I feel like we spend more time making statuses about the things we are doing then actually doing them.

With of all these cyber influences, sometimes we forget to stop and look up. We forget to look people in the eyes and see their souls, and to look at the sky wishing we could gather it in our hands. We forget to lay on dewy grass and get our butts wet or to stand on high places and feel our stomachs flutter. We forget that this life is incredibly short and before we know it, we won't be young anymore; and it won't be easy to remember what it was to feel life dawning with endless possibility.

And this is why we have yearbooks. It is my hope that as you read this, whether for the first time or the fiftieth, that you remember. When you see yourself on these pages, probably doing something ridiculous, think back to what it felt like in that moment and how no number of statuses could compare to that beautiful memory. Seniors, I hope you look through these pages and realize how blessed you were to belong to this place, and I hope you feel the sting of loss because that means there was something wonderful enough to regret losing. Most of all, I hope you read this book with a warm feeling in your heart; one that allows you to appreciate your time here, all the while dreaming of the amazing places you will go.

And if you are reading this to the grandkids fifty years down the line, I hope you look at this book and find rekindled memories in its pages. I hope you think of that time where you took a wrong turn and got lost, or think of what it felt like to laugh with your roommate until your sides creaked. It is my prayer that you remember being nineteen and impetuous and that you never forget the passion with which you lived your life when you were young. Whenever you look at this yearbook I want you to remember what is important and what isn't, and I hope that you will have filled your days with the people and things that will make your life worth talking about.

Nobody remembers what they posted as a status a year, month, or even week ago, but you will remember the times where you looked into the faces of your friends and saw love reflected there or watched a movie so sad that you thought your heart would burst. So go. Go face your fears and prove people wrong and make amazing stories. Go do things that challenge you and read books that make you think. And when you want to look back and remember the person you were, I hope you open this book and get that bittersweet feeling that creates an ache in your heart as, simultaneously, you smile at the memory of the places and people that shaped you.

God Bless,

Katie

the Colophon

What is this mysterious "Colophon" you may ask? Well, it is simply a really weird word that means we want to recognize the people and things that helped us to make the yearbook and say thanks to everyone who worked with us (in an over-the-top, multi-lingual type way).

Volume 91 of the Eastern Nazarene College Nautilus Yearbook was published by the Nautilus staff under the authority of the SGA Publications Board. The book was printed by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas. The Sales Representative was Conrad Schmidt and the Account Executive was Nancy Dewees.

Pages in this book were designed and made by the Nautilus staff using Adobe InDesign CS3 and Taylor Tools. Pages were submitted online to Nancy Dewees in PDF format. Adobe Photoshop, iPhoto, Preview 3.0 and www.brusheezy.com, Google Images, were also used. The Nautilus Yearbook is a size 8.5x11 trim book, containing 176 pages.

Special thanks go out to Karen Henck, the Nautilus Advisor, Vern Wesley and the Student Development Office, Jennifer Jacquet for her editing, the Student Government Association, and the Registrar's Office.

Additional thanks to all the individuals who submitted photos, the ENC Marketing Department, as well as the Veritas News for sharing photos.
